Hoffa Foe Quits To Aid Others

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — California Congressman John F. Shelley today withdrew as a candidate for the teamsters' president to aid what he said he hopes will become a combined opposition against James R. Hoffa.

Shelley's withdrawal, coming after teamster convention sessions began, left three others in the race against Hoffa, accused by the Senate rackets committee of misusing union funds and powers.

Hoffa is the leading candidate, however, to succeed retiring president Dave Beck, himself embroiled in corruption charges leveled by the Senate committee and parent AFL-CIO labor organization.

Beck won a standing ovation from the nearly 2,000 convention delegates after an emotional defence against corruption charges pending against him, Hoffa and other teamsters' leaders.

Shelley, Democratic congressman from California, pledged himself to work among Hoffa's opponents to select "a single victorious candidate whose election will repudiate the stigma which our present leadership has brought upon our organization."

Hoffa seemed well in command of the convention and was cheered along with Beck.

Beck, in a keynote address, said he and other teamster leaders, including Hoffa, have been unfairly dealt with by the Senate rackets investigators.

He said they were condemned on unproved charges before court trial.

Teamsters Ask Court Renew Order

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents of the present teamsters' union leadership asked the Supreme Court today to reinstate an injunction against the election of new teamster officers this week.

Lawyers for a New York group of rank-and-file union members filed an application with the court clerk seeking to restore the injunction.

Chief Justice Earl Warren of the United States Supreme Court said he would not make a decision today.

Polar Flight Lands

LONDON (UP) — The first plane to fly non-stop over the North Pole from Los Angeles to London landed here today.

The flying time for the 5,508 miles was 18 hours and 32 minutes.

Parley Plan By Fleming Supported

(See Also Page 3)

MONT TREMBLANT, Que. (CP) — Authoritative sources said today Canada got strong support from virtually all segments of the Commonwealth as she outlined her proposals for holding a full-scale Commonwealth trade and economic conference.

Finance Minister Fleming was reported to have opened his appeal for such a meeting with an 80-minute speech delivered before the finance ministers of the 11-country partnership.

Informants said he spoke in general terms without going into the details of his proposal. But the tenor of the reaction was there would be no opposition to getting ahead with plans for the full conference, the first of its kind in a quarter century.

"CATASTROPHE"

Britain's chancellor of the exchequer, Peter Thorneycroft, has already publicly announced support.

Spokesmen for such other countries as South Africa, India, Pakistan, Ghana and New Zealand have also indicated support for the move.

Meanwhile a suggestion to establish a British-Canadian free trade area, made Saturday by Peter Thorneycroft, British chancellor of the exchequer, drew immediate unfavorable reaction from Canadian manufacturers.

"Catastrophe," said Owen Greening, vice-president of the Greening Wire Co.

"With British wire drawers earning a wage of 90 cents an hour compared with $2.20 to $2.40 in Canada," Mr. Greening said, "we just can't possibly compete on an equal basis."

D. C. Gaskin, president of Studebaker-Packard of Canada, Limited, said: "So far as the automobile industry is concerned, we have already given our all in this business of tariff concessions to Britain—there is nothing left to give."

Several British newspapers commenting on a British proposal to set up an Anglo-Canadian free trade area, saw in it political difficulties for Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

The Financial Times says: "Canadian secondary industries are a good deal less prosperous than they would like to be. Several of them, at this moment, are pressing hard for increased tariff protection against U.K. imports."

"Pressure of this kind is more likely to grow than diminish and raises extremely serious problems for a party of Mr. Diefenbaker's political color with a general election to face in the near future."

LEADING FIGURES IN BIG CONVENTION

'Highly Regarded'

Miners Back on Job

GLACE BAY, N.S. (CP) — United Mine Workers headquarters here said today that "as far as we know" 6,000 Cape Breton coal miners returned to their jobs today following a five-day wildcat strike.

Boy Dies After Ordeal

CALGARY (CP) — Eleven-year-old Robert Johnson died in hospital Sunday night less than seven hours after he and a companion were buried alive in a tunnel they had dug in a pit near their northwest Calgary homes. Barry McDonald, nine, was revived by artificial respiration.

'THEY CALL HIM CHARLES'

Prince Escapes Germ As Flu Hits School

LONDON (UP) — Asian flu has hit Prince Charles' new school but the heir to the British throne is not among those affected.

Five of the 93 boys at Cheam School in Berkshire, 50 miles from London, have Asian flu, matron Stella Jacks reported. They are isolated in a special room and were reported progressing satisfactorily.

Charles went to the school, of which his father is a former pupil, last week. The London Daily Express quoted an unidentified member of the staff today as saying he seems to be "settling in well."

"He seems to be very popular with the other boys," the staff member said. "They call him Charles."

PRAYER FOR TODAY

Our Father, keep alive in us a compassion for those suffering in the distressed areas of the world. Deliver us from fear and frustration and by a victorious faith let us reach for help, fullness to all who need assistance; in the name of Christ, Amen.

Nearly 700 businessmen from across the country assembled in Victoria today for the official opening of the 28th annual meeting of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

It is the largest business convention ever held in the city. The brief opening ceremonies were held in the main ball room of the Empress Hotel at 9 a.m.

By 9:30 the work of the four-day conference was under way. A 50-man national policy committee, which is to meet all day and this evening in closed session, began hammering into form the many varied resolutions which will be presented to the membership Wednesday.

In an interview on his arrival Sunday, Raymond Dupuis of Montreal, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, said Canada needs a period of adjustment to balance her economy following the post-war boom.

Unparalleled Expansion Foreseen

"There is ample evidence of the hard work and enterprise you have put forth," Mr. Dupuis said.

Mr. Stephen told the delegates they had come to the capital city of a province "which we who live here believe stands upon the threshold of an era of unparalleled expansion and development."

Responsibilities of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce are great, the Victoria president said.

"... by the skill and imagination with which the business community utilizes today's opportunities to forestall tomorrow's perils will our Free World either live or perish," he said.

"Therefore, as business men and women, let us address us to our tasks during these next four days with a full sense of our responsibilities and with a determination that what we say and do here will advance Canadian leadership in the eyes of the watching world."

Mr. Dupuis, who called the first session to order, in turn praised the Victoria Chamber for its efforts in making the convention a success.

Delegates were welcomed this morning by Hugh Stephen, new president of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

The Victoria group has looked forward to the meeting "with eager anticipation for the past 12 months," Mr. Stephen said.

Mr. Dupuis, who called the first session to order, in turn praised the Victoria Chamber for its efforts in making the convention a success.

'WALK OR TAKE BUS' FOR ROAD CHECKS

The driving licence of Highway Minister Philip Gaglardi has been suspended for one month by the motor vehicle branch, as the result of his two convictions for speeding this year.

This came to light today after Mr. Gaglardi had already made a statement that whatever the MVB decided he intended to surrender his licence "for at least a month" so that there could not be any "accusations of favoritism."

Mr. Gaglardi was fined $10 for speeding on Trans-Canada Highway near Kamloops in August. In March he was fined for travelling too fast over Granville Street bridge in Vancouver.

Just back home in Kamloops from a good roads convention in Saskatoon, Mr. Gaglardi was told Sunday the MVB was processing his driving record.

He then said he intended to forfeit his licence temporarily.

"Though I was only doing 60 miles an hour—definitely not 85 as reported—I have broken the law and I'm ready to be punished," he said.

"I would also like to point out that in 30 years of driving I've never had a serious accident or appeared before a magistrate." In the Kamloops case the fine was paid through an agent.

Liberals Plan Early Meeting To Pick Chief

OTTAWA (CP) — The executive of the National Liberal Federation said today it has decided that a national leadership convention should be held at earliest possible date to pick a successor to Rt. Hon. Louis St. Laurent.

Mr. St. Laurent made it clear on arrival in Ottawa by train Sunday night that he intends to lead the Opposition through the autumn session of Parliament, starting Oct. 14.

Mr. St. Laurent is not a member of the executive council, and did not attend the meeting which is expected to sit all day and perhaps Tuesday.

VICTORIAN DETAINED BY SYRIANS

JERUSALEM (AP) — Two UN officers and an Israeli liaison officer were kidnapped by Syrians today but released and returned to Israel soon afterward, an Israeli spokesman said tonight. One of the UN officers was identified as a Canadian, Frederick G. Woodrow of Victoria, B.C.

NO DEMAND

"The question only affects about eight municipalities in the entire province. I don't know what the views of the others are. But I do know the people of Victoria voted overwhelmingly for an elected police commission."

"That power has been taken away without consulting either the council or the people. Yet the system (of electing commissioners) has been effective for 25 years here. There was no demand for any change."

The mayor said Victoria wanted endorsement of its resolution for amendment to the act which would maintain the elective system.

"The resolution was turned down by municipalities which had no interest in it. There were other examples but that was the most important one."

The mayor added, "I am going to recommend to council that we apply for a private charter. I am convinced our problems, in many cases, are quite different from the problems of the small municipalities."

Would Cut Municipal Union Ties

Mayor Percy Scurrah of Victoria today proposed the city should apply at the next session of the legislature for its own private charter.

He said this would mean a loosening of present ties with the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

He said he will ask council to take action on the matter at its October 10 meeting.

The mayor's statement followed a UBCM convention last week in Nelson.

A number of resolutions for Municipal Act changes which would have been beneficial to the city were turned down by the conference.

SOONER THE BETTER

"I came away convinced the sooner we apply for a private charter, the better off we'll be," said Mayor Scurrah. "The conviction had been growing in my mind."

The mayor is a member of the UBCM executive.

He said he was decided on the course after "... going to the UBCM and having all small municipalities vote on our resolutions which didn't affect them."

City manager C. C. Wyatt pointed out Vancouver is the only B.C. city with its own charter. It permits the city to deal with circumstances peculiar to its own area.

Vancouver has its charter amended yearly to adapt it to changing circumstances. This is done through a private bills committee without recourse to other B.C. municipalities.

The mayor quoted as an example of UBCM actions detrimental to Victoria, the question of elected or appointed police commissions. (The new Municipal Act states in future the mayor will be the only elected official on the commission. One will be appointed by the city, the other by the B.C. cabinet.)

SALES TAX, RUM BLOCK YUKON-B.C. MERGER

There are two good reasons why the Yukon Territory does not want to join British Columbia.

"We don't want your 5 per cent sales tax and we won't give up our 30 per cent overproof rum," said Rolfe Hougen, 28-year-old Whitehorse delegate to the Canadian Chamber of Commerce convention in Victoria.

Mr. Hougen is president of the Whitehorse Board of Trade which has consistently voted against union with B.C.

pression by making a special greeting in fluent French to the Quebec delegates.

(He admitted afterwards he had done some "brushing up" Sunday night, but once had command of the language.)

The chamber is a bilingual organization, and Mr. Dupuis disclosed that an amendment will be put forward at the convention to include the French title of the organization in its corporate title.

At the same time, three president said the special simultaneous French-English translation service usually provided would not be employed at this convention.

This was because of the distance involved in transporting the special equipment and difficulty in obtaining translators, Mr. Dupuis said.

Invocation at the opening session was made by Archbishop H. E. Sexton.

Greetings from the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Canada were extended by president Douglas A. Fisher of Aurora, Ont.

MANY HERE SUNDAY

Delegates and wives arrived in the city during the weekend, the largest group on Sunday.

They were entertained at a buffet supper in the Crystal Garden by the City of Victoria at 6 p.m. and watched an Aquacade put on by the Victoria Chamber.

The national board of directors went into session at 9 p.m. and appointed committee chairmen.

Program Tuesday includes the annual meeting at 9 a.m. and election of officers.

At 10 a panel of speakers will launch discussion on the convention theme — "Productivity—Key to Prosperity."

Mr. Dupuis said the theme can be interpreted as "expressing the belief that material wealth and freedom depend upon the amount each worker produces during a given length of time."

"To keep pace with the tremendous pressure of increasing populations, growing demands for natural resources and rising standards of living—the working forces of the world must move faster and faster even to stay where they are."

"Those nations making the fastest strides in productivity will enjoy the greatest measures of prosperity."

"From this can be seen that the goal of increased productivity can be attained only by teamwork—team work on the part of management, labor, government and the consumer."

TO SET POLICY

A total of 13 proposed policy declarations were due to be discussed at the closed session today.

The declarations were chosen from almost 30 proposals to be discussed in detail by the committee because they were "of a contentious nature."

The list includes declarations on: Communism, profits, marketing, National Film Board, employer-employee relations, automation, employment of older workers, seasonal unemployment, immigration and citizenship, national health and health services, natural resources, Canada-United States relations and international trade relations.

The proposals, after discussion by the policy committee, will be presented to a plenary session of the meeting, open to discussion by all delegates.

The policy will then be presented to the federal government, probably in November. The policy will be the basis for all Chamber statements throughout the 1957-58 year.

FIRST DISCUSSION

The declarations on automation and on employment of older workers are both new parts of the chamber policy, under discussion here for the first time. Both were submitted by the executive council.

Dark and eloquent, Mr. Dupuis is president of the family firm of Dupuis Freres, which operates one of the largest department store and mail order houses in Montreal.

Formerly a practicing lawyer, he joined the board of directors in 1935.

"I am confident of the buoyancy of the Canadian economy," Mr. Dupuis said. "We may have some ups and downs but the general trade picture is bright, and by 1960 we should have adjusted ourselves to the new conditions."

"I am not too concerned over the credit situation, because Canadians generally are thrifty and level-headed and do not take on commitments beyond their means."

SAVINGS HIGHER

"This is evident from the fact that collections of consumer credit accounts are generally satisfactory while personal savings in the chartered banks have passed the $6 billion mark."

"Canadian consumers have more purchasing power than ever before, they are considerably more numerous and they have more take-home pay."

"The domestic market is becoming an important factor in our Canadian economy. It is true we must rely to a large extent on external trade. But we are also in a good position to absorb a good proportion of our home production."

STABBING VICTIM DIES IN VANCOUVER HOSPITAL

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 50-year-old east-end rooming house operator died in Vancouver General Hospital today of stab wounds.

William Ostashek was found stabbed in the left side of his abdomen Sunday. Police were called to the rooming house by John Kowbel, who said Ostashek told him someone had tried to kill him.

Police said they found a kitchen knife believed to be the weapon used on Ostashek. It was found wrapped in a towel.

A 47-year-old man was being questioned by police Sunday night.

"It will reduce our participation in the UBCM about 80 per cent."

"We can get along without the support of the smaller municipalities. We could hook up (for purposes of seeking special legislation) with Vancouver, and our demands would represent the people of about half the provincial population."

Mr. Wyatt agreed with the mayor, if Victoria is granted a private charter it could make the question of amalgamation in this area "more attractive," depending on what power is given.

Mr. Wyatt said Victoria drew up a draft charter some years ago while Arthur Patton was city solicitor. It contained several changes which have since been incorporated in the new Municipal Act.

The draft charter was shelved until the new act was made public.

Mr. Wyatt thought it "is quite possible" the government would permit Victoria, in a private charter, to elect its own police commission.

RAMSAY DOUBTFUL

If the city were granted the right to make other decisions now withheld from municipalities covered by the Act, surrounding municipalities might wish to enter Victoria.

Ald. Hugh Ramsay, who saw the UBCM toss out his pet resolution (which asked the government to stabilize the methods of applying business tax and trade licence levies), was doubtful, however, that Victoria should split too far from the UBCM.

"It may take two or three years for us to obtain a private charter. We wouldn't want to antagonize the UBCM." But, he added, he would support the request for a charter.

Ald. J. Donald Smith last week, without recourse to council, said he would take the matter to the legislature personally. He is an MLA for the city.

Faubus Undecided On Calling House

From AP and UP Dispatches

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—Governor Orval Faubus today said "at the moment, it appears very likely there will be a special session of the legislature" to take up the Little Rock integration crisis.

Such a session would be asked to deal with the Little Rock school integration controversy in which Faubus is arrayed against the federal government.

Faubus added with emphasis, however, that the special session "still isn't definite."

MAY CLOSE SCHOOL

There have been suggestions that the legislature be asked to close Little Rock Central High School where federal troops are enforcing court ordered integration of nine Negro students—and have the school reopened as a private institution.

Faubus said he thinks the legislature is "predominantly" in favor of an extra session.

In Washington, some government officials expressed doubt today that Gov. Faubus or the Arkansas legislature can legally disintegrate Central High School in Little Rock.

"That would be an act to evade the constitutional rights of the colored children," said one government legal source here in close touch with the Little Rock situation.

"The courts would not permit it. They (the state) would have to close down all the schools in Little Rock, not just the one racially-mixed school in the city."

Meanwhile, the second week of integrated education at Central High School began peacefully today. A reduced force of paratroopers, with bayonets removed from their rifles, stood guard as nine Negro children entered the school without incident.

FIFTH SCHOOL CLOSED

TRAIL—School and medical authorities here Saturday ordered a fifth Trail school closed because of an influenza epidemic.

James A. Stewart, co-ordinator of teaching and counselling for School District 11, said the Rossland Junior-Senior High joined four others shut because of the epidemic.

The total school population of the five schools is 2,500.

SKUNK YIELDS TO GAS

EDMONTON (CP) — The gas company outgassed a skunk here Sunday.

The animal became firmly entrenched beneath the floor of a south-side home and wouldn't move. The house was evacuated, a hole drilled in the floor and ammonia hydroxide poured in.

The gas from the chemical killed the skunk.

Tariff-Scrapping Plan Offered Canada by U.K.

MONT TREMBLANT, Que. (CP) — In perhaps the most far-reaching suggestion of its kind, Britain has proposed a gradual scrapping of all Anglo-Canadian tariffs as a means of expanding trade between the two countries.

But there was mounting opposition in official Canadian quarters on the grounds such a move might wreck large segments of comparatively young Canadian industry, which probably would find it difficult to compete with lower-cost United Kingdom production.

The proposal, which hit this Commonwealth finance ministers meeting like a bombshell, was disclosed at a Saturday night press conference by Peter Thorneycroft, chancellor of the U.K. exchequer. Finance Minister Donald Fleming, who sat by his side, emphasized that the offer had not been formally presented to the Canadian government. He could not "prejudge" the suggestion which is to be considered at bilateral talks at Ottawa Wednesday. But what he had seen of speculative reports led him to believe that it would present "very formidable difficulties" for his government.

Canadian Rejection Seen Certain

Later it was stated in authoritative quarters it would be a "fair sizing up of the situation" if the conclusion was reached that Canada would have to reject the proposal as an overall project.

Canada might accept parts of it, but it was understood from U.K. sources that Britain would not agree unless Canada accepted gradual abolition of tariffs between the two countries "right across the board."

The tariff proposal, which veteran observers here compared with Britain's wartime 1940 invitation to France to join the Commonwealth, was not discussed at the 11-country ministerial talks here. But it became the sensational news of the weekend.

Today, the meeting turns to the Canadian suggestion for holding a full-dress Commonwealth trade and economic conference to increase trade in that area.

U.K. Willing to Talk Alternatives

Mr. Thorneycroft said it would be discussed at Ottawa as the "most adventurous" way of implementing Prime Minister Diefenbaker's proposed switch of 15 per cent of Canada's imports from the United States to Britain.

He hurried to add that he realized the suggestion raised a lot of complexities for the Anglo-Canadian governments. It might be difficult for the Canadian government to implement such a project immediately. Meanwhile, alternatives might be considered, such as increased purchase in Britain by Canadian government agencies.

Britain would like to see Canada buy more of her cars, textiles, engineering products and other goods.

Britain did not want to be held to the 15 per cent figure—this would amount to some $600,000,000 a year, added to the $485,000,000 Britain currently exports to Canada. But Britain did feel there was room for increased Canadian imports from British factories.

Mr. Thorneycroft emphasized that his proposals on Anglo-Canadian trade were not the last word on the matter. The whole thing was open to discussion and further investigation.

In authoritative Canadian quarters it was stated the U.K. proposal was an embarrassment to the Canadian government. It appeared to be a counter-move to Mr. Diefenbaker's 15 per cent proposal. Canadian authorities felt that Britain was more keenly interested in the European market than the Canadian.

U.S. Atom Test Warning to Russ

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP)—The United States declared today it will continue nuclear test explosions until the Soviet Union agrees to stop producing atomic and hydrogen weapons.

In a speech before the UN's 12-power disarmament commission, U.S. delegate Henry Cabot Lodge challenged the Kremlin to accept such a ban on stockpiling weapons if it really wants to end the nuclear tests.

If the Soviet Union is not prepared to agree, Lodge said: "Then I say with all the solemnity that I can that we are faced with a present major danger far graver than the problematic minor danger that comes from the testing of nuclear weapons in order to make the new power available for defence without dangerous fallout."

He added: "Such unwillingness could confront us and other nations of the free world with a powerful nation whose conduct would only be explained . . . by its determination to impose military domination in the world."

OFFERS TWO YEAR TERM

Lodge told the commission that, if Russia would agree in principle to the U.S. terms, then the United States would be ready to end the tests for a two-year period. He said the ban would go into effect without delay, even while inspection machinery was being discussed.

C. S. A. Ritchie, who represented Canada in the London disarmament talks, repeated the assertion that the western proposals would not put Russia at a disadvantage and called for "patient negotiations" to continue.

"I trust Russia will be willing to carry on this spirit," he said.

Canada regretted Russia's "scornful rejection" of the western proposal.

Soviet delegate Arkady A. Sobolev insisted on an immediate and unconditional end of the tests. He said the United States was frustrating the hopes of millions by linking this question to other disarmament problems.

John D. Drops Import Switch, Says U.K. Paper

LONDON (CP)—The Observer says Canada has quietly dropped Prime Minister Diefenbaker's plan to transfer 15 per cent of Canada's imports from the United States to Britain.

Canadian businessmen believe that Britain simply cannot supply quickly enough the goods that Canada needs. The Observer says in a front page story.

Canadian goodwill had also been stretched a little thin by British purchases of wheat from the United States.

"Officially, Britain claims that this is because the U.S. wheat has a higher protein content," the Sunday paper says. "But no one in the grain trade . . . believes this. In any case, it is belied by the poor quality of flour which Britain's housewives are buying today."

The independent paper adds that the U.S. has been undercutting the wheat market by such devices as delivering by quality wheat than specified in the contract price or by allowing rebates for alleged "short delivery" even in cases where full delivery is received.

The Time Is Now

IN APPEALING FOR A QUARTER of a million dollars for charity this year, the Greater Victoria Community Chest is requesting a record sum from a record population in a community that is enjoying a record prosperity. There is no good reason why the objective should not be attained.

For various reasons the total is larger than the $220,000 required last year. The city itself is growing, bringing added responsibilities for the agencies that cater for the sick, the young, the old, the troubled. Two more agencies have been added to the group which makes a united appeal each year through the Community Chest. The expenses of most agencies have mounted, partly through additional calls on their services, partly through the generally rising price level that affects all businesses and households in these times.

In these respects the Greater Victoria Chest does not differ from Chests in other communities in Canada and the United States. In one respect, however, the local organization does differ from many others: its percentage costs of collection and administration are among the lowest on the continent.

It is important to remember that a contribution to the Chest is not a gift to one organization. The Chest itself has no existence apart from the 20 agencies it serves. It is merely an arrangement to collect the funds each year and apportion them out to the member agencies on the basis of need and availability.

Unless a contribution is specifically named for one or more agencies, it will be spread over the whole group. That is something to keep in mind in deciding how much to give. There are 20 agencies, there are 365 days during which they must carry on their work.

In lumping their needs into one annual appeal to the public the agencies are avoiding the necessity for 20 separate requests for generosity, and they are avoiding the extra expense that such duplication would entail.

The annual Community Chest campaign is now established as one of the major events of our community life. It is the period during which a concentrated effort is made to provide for the necessary and valuable work that is done throughout the year. This city and its surrounding areas would certainly be unpleasant to live in if that work had to be halted. It can only continue through the contributions of each one of us.

Hosts to Canada's Business

AS THEY BEGAN THEIR SERIOUS sessions today, delegates to the Canadian Chamber of Commerce convention could rest assured of the warmth of Victoria's welcome to the industrial and business leaders of the nation.

The importance of discussions during the next few days here is widely recognized. The policy decisions which are reached will have widespread effects.

Victorians appreciate the significance of this annual gathering. Beyond that, as residents of the host city, they hope the visitors will enjoy themselves in a capital world-renowned for its attractiveness as a convention centre.

The Victoria Daily Times joins in the wish that the deliberations of the convention delegates will be profitable and that the social affairs and entertainment will impress lasting and pleasant memories on Canadian Chamber of Commerce members who are our guests.

Councillors and Honor

DR. CHARLOTTE WHITTON, former mayor of Ottawa, has left the delegates to the Union of British Columbia Municipalities Convention with a few points to puzzle out.

She will doubtless have found generous agreement for her argument that it is vital to establish respect and prestige for public office. Too often the worthwhile citizen who is elected finds that on attaining office he is presumed to have lost some of his abilities.

This impression is understandable to a degree. When a person enters public life, his verbal indiscretions and possible errors in judgment become public also. In private life he could make his own private mistakes.

Office holders can, of course, avoid criticism on that score if they can avoid making mistakes. But they cannot preserve respect and an air of wisdom merely by saying nothing or by taking no stand on issues of the moment. The voting public accepts such silence and inactivity as definite evidence of incapacity—a ready subject for unkind ridicule.

Certainly it is time that citizens showed greater understanding of a public man's difficulties and extended to him a higher measure of respect for his conscientious efforts to serve.

A Forward Step

A RECENT ANNOUNCEMENT from the laboratory of Dr. Price at Johns Hopkins reveals that "an opening wedge" has been driven into the medical barrier posed by the common cold.

As in any such medical discovery great care was taken not to create a false impression. The cold is not defeated. But there is hope that one of apparently several cold viruses—one which was isolated four years ago—has perhaps met its match.

Conservative claims are made for the new vaccine. But if this is indeed a break-through in a hitherto impenetrable wall, then other advances may well follow in the near future.

The story of such medical victories lies rarely in spectacular announcements or discoveries. It consists rather of long and patient research, of hours of drudgery, of persistent determination, and usually of highly organized teamwork. Through such dedicated toil, the barriers will fall one by one in man's march to full control of his environment.

Russia and the Fitting Question

ONE OF THE LIGHTER SIDES of Soviet discontent is reflected in the reported Russian dissatisfaction with the clothes they wear.

It is permissible now for Ivan to object that his suit doesn't make him look the man he'd like to look. Anna can protest that the lines of her dress do little for her.

There is a typical Slavic heaviness in the Soviet Government's decision to enlist the services of anthropologists to help provide the average citizen with better fitting clothes. But the significance of the sartorial revolt runs deeper than this.

The Kremlin now knows that the comrades aren't satisfied with their external appearance. But the Kremlin, for obvious reasons, has limited means of determining how far below the surface this discontent extends. The average Russian, for self-preservation, is not yet ready to express discontent freely over the tailoring of the mind and spirit to which he is subjected.

Perhaps there may be implications of such discontent not far beyond the borders. Mr. Gomulka and Mr. Tito have given such indications.

Is it too much to speculate that Ivan is as seriously concerned with the way Kremlin-manufactured ideas fit inside his head as he is with the way his hat sits atop it?

How About You?

LET 'EM HAVE IT

By B. A. TOBIN

It Works Both Ways

WHEN Community Chest canvassers they like best is: "Sure, I'm all ready for you. Here's my contribution."

For a lot of needy folk in our community, that's the answer that is heard most often too. But the canvassers don't always get it; occasionally a locked door, a barking dog, or an eye peeking from behind an upstairs window shade is the only reply to their knock. On the other hand they sometimes run into a refusal that is so unusual and off-beat that its sheer originality takes the disappointment out of it. For instance, I remember a Red Feather canvasser once telling me that he knocked at a door in the downtown section and asked for a donation from the man who answered. "Nope," said the fellow. "I've paid my road and poll tax and that's all I'm giving this year."

Dead Stop The collector was all primed to answer a hundred different questions and meet any kind of argument, but that reply stumped him. He walked away with a glazed look in his eye, completely defeated.

"PS. Don't try it this year; there isn't any road and poll tax any more."

But maybe the citizen wasn't so wrong after all in confusing charitable donations and city taxes. Because basically they have something in common: Just as a community cannot do its job without tax revenues, neither can it function properly without charitable revenues.

In the former case the law collects it. In the latter it's a matter of appealing to people's generosity. And significantly enough, in the long run the voluntary type of collection seems to be as successful as the enforced levy.

That says quite a lot for human nature. When a community problem is clearly presented to most folks you don't have to do any arguing. Their own generous feelings will give the right answer.

No Hardship In comparatively few cases, actually, do charitable donations mean that the giver has to do without something himself. The gift of a few dollars gets swallowed up in the year's spending and nobody suffers too much.

That's why the widow's mite has always rated more appreciation than the ordinary contribution. Where charity means real self-denial, it takes on a touch of glory—it's the real thing.

And there are many annual givers in Greater Victoria who have that touch too. Pensioners, widows with families to support, old folks whose personal pride is still a shining thing—you'll find them handing over their gift with the cheerful good wishes that make it worth many times its monetary value.

But the backbone of any public appeal is of course the response from that main body of citizens who aren't especially rich and aren't especially poor—just the folks you mean when you speak of "the people of Greater Victoria." They're the ones who can make or break a campaign in any city. Victoria is pretty lucky in that respect.

Double Duty It's around this time—Community Chest time—each year that a lot of people develop split personalities. They don't suffer from it though; they enjoy it. What I have in mind is tied up in the story about the little boy at Sunday school.

"After all," the teacher told him, "we're really on this earth to help others."

"Okay," says the lad. "But what are the others here for?"

It's a fair question, and it has a fair answer. The answer is that when you give to someone else you're both a giver and receiver at the same time. The "others" benefit, of course. But you benefit too. You become one of them.

Shakespeare might have included generosity along with mercy when he said "It bleaseth him that gives and him that takes."

Generosity is a much better bargain than life insurance or annuities. You don't have to wait until you're old or dead to cash in on it. The returns are there right away, as soon as you give.

Social Dividends You get a warm feeling from thinking of the folks who are benefiting from your gift. You feel more than ever that you're a part of your community—you've made an investment in citizenship that will return handsome dividends.

And you can look at the face in your shaving mirror or compact and know that you're seeing somebody who recognizes a call for charitable help when it comes, and knows what to do about it.

When you're helping your fellow man you're like a hydro power plant. You light up the community, but in doing so you light up yourself too.

Give the Red Feather canvassers a good welcome when they call this year. Go out and find one if you happen to be missed out. You won't lose by casting your bread upon the waters. You'll just be proving that you know which side it's buttered on.

YES, SIR, IF THAT OL' GIANT WAS THAT TALL, HE COULD LOOK RIGHT IN THAT WINDOW!

As Our Readers See It.

Broken Promises

At the last provincial general election I heard the Hon. Mr. Chant promise Victoria a new Court House at least three times.

In one of your issues last week it is reported that he said other places have no court facilities. This is surely hedging on the issue and I doubt very much if we shall see this promised new building for many years.

There will be, however, one consolation: that Victoria will by then have a member other than Mr. Chant. Many voters I have spoken to are very angry over these broken promises. When Government House burned down we were told it would be rebuilt before the centenary celebrations. Yet another broken promise.

Another minister making an exhibition of himself is Mr. Gagliardi. To wilfully break the speed limit on our highways is a poor example for a minister of the Crown (and the Gospel) to set our youth. His reference to the police who picked him up as "punks" is at least unchristian and a shocking expression coming from a reverend gentleman, whom Mr. Bennett describes as "a great man of God."

"How small these men,
How weak, how brittle,
When posing great
How truly little."
WALTER HILEY.

Endangering Lives

Surely Mr. Gagliardi was quoted wrongly in the newspapers regarding speeding and police officers and, if not, since when can any official endanger the lives of the public by testing curves on the highway without first giving warning?

If any such test is to take place the hour and the location should be under police supervision. The only people who would use the word "punk" in relation to any of our law enforcement agencies are the ones who run foul of the law.

Park, Gate and Traffic

The Broadway which has been ruthlessly cut through a beautiful wild area of Beacon Hill Park is now about completed except for black top. At least a third of the open area in front of Beacon Hill Park school has also been sacrificed to the insatiable demands of the auto.

This new road with switch back vill, I think, prove an irresistible lure to the young punks in cars (where do they get the money for them) who delight in taking dangerous corners far too fast with their tires squealing in protest.

The chief purpose of the new highway is undoubtedly an attempt to give the civil servants, who abound in James Bay, a quick exit. But will it achieve this laudable object? There is going to be a very intricate position directly in front of the Thunderbird Motel where five streets meet, six if you include Heywood Avenue which is only a very few feet away and a blind corner at that. Are lights going to be installed here?

With the heavy traffic along Douglas and Blanshard Streets (both breasting a steep hill) there is sure to be a nice tie-up of traffic, morning, noon (home lunchers) and night. Where is the precious gate going to be erected? Not at the Douglas Street entrance, one hopes, and, unless it is of glass, it is likely to obstruct a driver's view very materially. A gate however ornamental seems a quite unnecessary luxury for a city like Victoria which carries one of the heaviest municipal debts of any in Canada. Surely in our park, which is not very large, we want trees and flowers and perhaps a few animals for the children—ducks there in plenty, indeed far too many. But ornate and ugly buildings, no.

Having opened up this very neglected part of the park will Mr. Warren and his staff try to imitate Butchart Gardens in miniature? The materials are all there. We could have a waterfall and pond where the old mine is now. They do it in the arboretum in Vancouver and very lovely it looks.

The area from Cook to Linden along the waterfront should be planted with suitable trees, this winter.

Flogging

Due to lack of discipline and proper correction it seems that teen-agers have virtually established a reign of terror. Offences like the two cowardly attacks of violence by youthful thugs last week prey on the nerves of the gentler sex especially, so that many are afraid to venture out at night.

Commissioner Hamilton has the right idea when he says "physical punishment is necessary to bring these hoodlums to their senses." The soft treatment hitherto handed out is no deterrent. While the biblical law of "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth" means that no punishment shall be given an offender greater than his crime, at the same time it provides for adequate punishment that will ensure a non-repetition of the offence.

The divine law is perfect justice, and supersedes anything devised by man. Accordingly, "to make the punishment fit the crime," flogging would be the proper sentence sufficiently severe to bring multiple abrasions as suffered by their victims.

Consider Consumer

Your excellent editorial, "Consider the Consumer" September 19, citing the pressure being brought to bear on the federal government to repeal the law against retail price maintenance, brings to mind the remarks of a former cabinet minister.

He had evidently been besieged by lobbyists urging tariff and other legislation to benefit their particular interests at the expense of the consumer. The minister is reported to have said that he often wondered what would happen to such pressure groups if consumers were for protection of one sort and another, any of which if granted, would raise living costs for all the users.

It is estimated that women do 80 per cent of the buying of consumer goods in this country. For this reason representatives of all the leading women's organizations in Canada met together in the year 1947 and formed the Canadian Association of Consumers, with a view to becoming informed consumers and having a voice.

This association has presented the consumer viewpoint to the Canadian Tariff Board on several occasions, including the hearings on retail price maintenance. Their brief stated "... Consumers have an indisputable right to the only protection against exploitation they possess—outside of the dangerous one of government price control—that is, free competition."

FROM LITTLE ROCK, ARK. By STEWART ALSOP

Dragon in the Box

ONE native of this unhappy city used an odd phrase to describe the situation here. "It's kind of like you put a dragon in a wooden hog-box," he said. "That dragon is sure as hell gonna escape."

In the last few days here, the dragon has all too visibly escaped from the box. For what has happened here has revealed, with awful clarity, the bitter tensions that underlie the placid surface of American life. Little Rock, after all, a rather typical American town—throughout the crisis, life has gone on here much as elsewhere, with fall bargain sales and bridge teas and meetings of the service clubs. Little Rock is not even a real Deep South town—the proportion of Negroes here is not much more than half that in Washington, D.C., and there is nothing here like the solid Negro city within the city you find in Philadelphia or New York or Chicago.

Little Rock's race relations have been uneventful in recent years, and the racial extremists have found no support in the press, which is not true in some other Southern towns. The Negroes vote here in important numbers, and the Little Rock integration plan is more symbolic than real.

Dragon Escaped For such reasons, knowledgeable people had advertised Little Rock's integration in advance as a model of what peaceful integration ought to be. Instead, the dragon of racial violence has escaped, leading to the greatest constitutional crisis since the Civil War. And the end, almost certainly, is not yet.

To be sure, Orval Faubus, Arkansas' devious and ambitious Governor, let the dragon out of the box. The point not to overlook is that the dragon was there all the time, lurking beneath the calm exterior of this seemingly typical American city.

The unreasoning fears and frustrations and ugly hates which surround the race issue—and not only in the South—have boiled horribly to the surface. You could read them on the contorted faces of the housewives screaming outside the high school on Monday morning, or in the sheepish-secret-sullen faces of the crowds retreating before federal bayonets on Wednesday.

The optimists believe that President Eisenhower's intervention has nailed the dragon in the box again. It will, in the words of one optimist, "restore the doctrine of inevitability."

Even the most passionate extremists will recognize that some degree of integration is inevitable, say the optimists, and when the federal troops are withdrawn, local police will be able to protect the Negro children in the high school, and maintain order.

Others are not so sure. In the streets around the school house on Wednesday morning, you could hear muttered phrases in the sullen crowds: "They're gonna have to pull out those soldiers some time," or "If they want a fight, by God they'll get a fight."

Even the optimists admit that the ugliest sort of racial violence is still possible here, whether in the city itself beyond the reach of the troops at the school house, or at the school after the troops have been withdrawn. But even if the optimists are right, and the dragon is safely nailed in the hog-box here in Little Rock, what has started here is unlikely to end here.

For it is grimly significant that even his bitterest enemies agree that, as of today, Orval Faubus is a hero in Arkansas. If an election were held tomorrow, he would win hands down against all comers.

The Faubus formula for political success might read as follows: Defy the federal government, and thus create a situation in which mob violence and federal intervention are inevitable, and bask thereafter in the warm glow of popular approval.

The meaning of the Faubus formula is not lost, surely, on other politicians of the Faubus stripe.

Already, moreover, the extremists have achieved a blackmail power in a good many parts of the South, so that it takes real courage to take a moderate stand in public. Interview a moderate on the integration issue in Little Rock today, and you are almost certain to hear the timid, meaningful phrase: "But don't quote me."

Good Sense

On the other side of the ledger are the good sense of the majority of Southerners, and the recognition by responsible Southern leaders that violence is a sharp-cutting, two-edged sword.

But Little Rock makes one thing clear. If the dragon is not to escape from the hog-box again, and in an even more terrible way, President Eisenhower must achieve a near-miracle of national leadership, at once boldly firm and infinitely cautious. For no one who has witnessed the ugly events in Little Rock in the last few days could doubt that there is in the racial issue the stuff to tear the country to pieces.

Retrospect

I AM sitting in a hotel at Prince George, and wondering just how long it will be before I come this way again. Because, although I've seen a lot thanks to the kindness of innumerable people, I've still not seen all I want to. I've found the answers to some of the questions I started out with, but along the way I've picked up a bumper crop of brand new questions. Somehow, some day, I must find the answers to them.

However, I've seen the John Hart Highway, and I can understand now what a news item means when it says that a road accident was due to "excessive dust conditions." Twice, our bus had to come to a halt and wait for the dust to subside after we had met two heavy trucks in quick succession. Now I can understand why nearly every vehicle I saw from Prince George to Whitehorse had a cracked or pitted windshield.

I can understand, too, why these highways are so important. The John Hart Highway is 255 miles from Prince George to Dawson Creek. It's not as spectacular as I thought it would be, but it was most exciting to come down from Pine Pass, and, with the Rockies behind us, to see the rolling golden country of the Peace stretching out ahead.

This lovely land of farms and natural gas and oil is part of British Columbia, though we Victorians are apt to forget that fact, and to ignore what the John Hart Highway has done to link the Peace River country with the part of British Columbia that lies west of the Rockies.

The best story I heard about this stretch of road concerned a woman from Vancouver who had stopped with a smashing but dusty car at one of the infrequent cafes along the way.

"This dreadful highway," said the tired and raging woman from Vancouver. "You've no right to expect people to travel on such roads. Look at my windshield, will you? It's a crime to take a good car on this road."

The woman at the cafe almost lost her temper. "You don't see the road the way we see it," she said, with the angry tears very close to the surface. "I've lived in this country for years. We couldn't go any place. Not for any real distance. And then the road came through. Now we can go places. We have the road. I tell you we have the road. Sure, it's gravel. Sure, it's dusty. Sure, it may not look like much to you. To us, it's wonderful. You come through here, cursing it. But you don't begin to understand."

I also like the story of the old, old man who loves the bridge where the Alaska Highway crosses the Peace River on its way to Fort St. John.

To the right of the bridge as you go north there are two pipe lines crossing the river from Taylor Flats. To the left, upstream, is the new bridge for the P.G.E. On Taylor Flat, which was fertile farmland less than two years ago, there are houses and trailers and stores and a small movie house. They've come because of the new refineries and scrubbing plant.

But the old man I heard about loves the road bridge specially. Whenever he passes that way, he stops to look at it.

"A bridge across the Peace," he says. "I never thought I'd live to see a bridge there across the Peace."

And that bridge is being used, make no mistake about it.

An average count of 2,900 vehicles a day went over the Peace River Bridge at Taylor Flats this summer," said W. T. Lambly, supervising resident engineer for the northern section of the P.G.E.

Well—it's about time that we Victorians stopped thinking that British Columbia is made up of Victoria and the Island with a place called Vancouver somewhere on the fringe.

LONDON LETTER

By WALLACE REYBURN

Paints as He Sees It

LONDON—Enthusiastic about his portrait of the Queen and luke-warm about the one he did of Prince Philip, folks here are wondering what sort of a job Italian artist Annigoni is going to do on Princess Margaret.

As you know, she has been brought very much back in the news with another marriage rumor, cooked up by the Daily Sketch as a welcome relief for the British public from the depressing reports of sex crimes on youngsters which have been filling the papers lately.

Amidst discussion of whether she will in truth marry Billy Wallace (she has always liked him because he is a life-of-the-party type and makes her laugh) people have been wondering how the Annigoni portrait is coming along, and it appears he is putting the finishing touches to it at his country home on the outskirts of Florence. He will be bringing it back to London with him when he comes here next month.

The painting has her in a plain white gown without any accessories, holding around the gown a dark-colored off-the-shoulders cape. Those who have seen it think it's excellent but Annigoni admits that Princess Margaret doesn't like it.

"What she doesn't like about it she doesn't seem to be able to decide," says Annigoni, "but I think it's something to do with the face."

However, when he shows her the finished product next month whatever she says he doesn't intend to alter it. He paints as he sees, says Annigoni, and if the subject doesn't like it, that's just too bad.

AGATHA CHRISTIE has broken the London theatre's long-run record for a straight play with her thriller The Mousetrap. First performed in November, 1952, it has passed the former record held by Coward's Blithe Spirit—1,997 performances.

The record for all types of plays is held by the musical Chu Chin Chow, which entertained many a Canadian serviceman on leave in London during First World War. Its record, 2,238 performances.

But it looks as though that record will go by the board, too. Advance bookings for The Mousetrap will carry it well into next year and if it runs beyond April it will beat Chu Chin Chow.

London's two other longest runs are the current musicals The Boy Friend (1,495 performances) and Salad Days (1,297).

THIS COMES under the heading of the World We Live In. On the market is something new for pipe-smokers. It is the TV pipe. With an angled mouth-piece, the bowl juts out from your chin and doesn't interrupt your view of the TV screen.

Keep Lasting Record Of All Plant Names

Gardening hints cover many angles of the art, ranging all the way from how to prepare holes for planting trees to how to dry and use kitchen herbs.

This particular hint deals with keeping a permanent record of every permanent plant added to the garden.

Plant names are of little importance to some gardeners, who do not realize that specific information cannot be given regarding their plants in the future if they themselves cannot name them.

Nearly all local nurserymen have a name tag on every plant they send out and it is that name which should be permanently recorded in some way by the purchaser.

It is not possible to use permanent tags commercially without increasing the price of the product, but such tags are available and should be used by the gardener. Narrow aluminum tags may be attached firmly to wooden stakes, or strips of galvanized iron may have plant names printed in black paint.

The value is not only to the owner, but to visitors to the garden who would like to get exactly the same kind of apple tree, or peony, or rhododendron.

Several pages in a garden

notebook might well be given to lists of the shrubs, trees, and perennials and their locations in the garden.

Better still is a large rough plan of the garden with either numbers or the names themselves printed in. In the case of numbers, the notebook would carry the corresponding number and the plant name.

I know of one case where property changed hands after the owner had thoughtfully laid out the foundation for a fine garden and had taken the time to make a rough plan, with plant names. Now the new owner has double pleasure, a new garden with every thing named.

Another garden which has changed hands recently has a choice selection of 12 different fruit trees. Not one variety has so far been definitely named. It may take years—yet everyone is saying, "What lovely fruit! I would like the same. What variety is it?"

New method for saving and improving hair will be demonstrated by M. D. Harrison in Victoria at the Sussex Apartments on Tuesday and Wednesday

NEW HOME TREATMENT HOLDS HOPE FOR THOSE THREATENED WITH BALDNESS

Many old-fashioned misconceptions about baldness are being discarded these days with the discovery of new and improved methods of treating the hair and scalp. M. D. Harrison Specialist has revealed that men who once shrugged off their gradual loss of hair as an unavoidable fact—something they just had to put up with because of heredity, etc., are being shown that there is something they can do about it in all except a small minority of cases.

M. D. HARRISON HAIR AND SCALP SPECIALIST, through his intense research has brought about amazing methods for treating local disorders of the hair and scalp. The promise that this research now holds out to balding men and women is contained in a remarkably effective method of home treatment which can be employed easily by anyone once the examination determines the cause of your individual Hair and Scalp problems.

NEW METHOD DEMONSTRATED IN VICTORIA

The HARRISON method of treatment is being demonstrated this week in this city by the well-known Hair and Scalp Specialist—M. D. Harrison, Chief Administrator of the Harrison Hair and Scalp Clinic. His years of experience and skill as an expert on hair and scalp problems has enabled thousands of people doomed to baldness to again enjoy healthier and thicker hair.

M. D. Harrison will be here only two days, and in that time is giving residents of this city the opportunity to have a free examination and advice on their hair and scalp problems. If you are worrying about your hair going instead of growing—and if you haven't let your hair fall out to the "drumhead" stage—chances are M. D. Harrison can suggest a home treatment for your specific needs.

The complete examination, which puts you under no obligation, will be to the point and frank. We do not accept cases where it appears doubtful results will be obtained. But the chances are 10 to 1 you can be helped.

REASON FOR BALDNESS

There are so many common factors causing hair loss which

CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE

MR. MILQUETOAST CONSIDERS THIS A MOST DANGEROUS TIME OF THE YEAR TO TRAVEL IN THE COUNTRY.

Proper Flag, Voting Apathy Leading Topics for Chamber

Adoption of a national flag for Canada, the "apathy" of Canadian voters and monopoly control legislation are among a number of contentious subjects to be discussed by delegates to the Canadian Chamber of Commerce annual meeting this week.

Others are judges' salaries, highways, and the pollution of air and water by industrial enterprise.

Chamber policy on these and other subjects will be ironed out at a policy session—the only closed session of the convention—to be held Tuesday under the joint chairmanship of A. C. Ashforth, Toronto, and Jack Pembroke, Montreal.

At this session resolutions and policy declarations submitted by some 765 boards and chambers throughout Canada will be discussed by a national policy committee.

AIRIED WEDNESDAY

The committee's findings will be presented to a general session Wednesday afternoon when all delegates will have an opportunity to air their views.

Each board or chamber, regardless of size, has one vote in determining policy. This year a record number of more than 40 new resolutions has been submitted.

Election of chamber officers for the year ahead and reports by officers will occupy the Tuesday morning session, followed by a panel discussion on productivity under the chairmanship of Leonard Hynes, Montreal.

Speakers will be Prof. J. C. Cameron of Queen's University, Kingston, Ont.; Edward Benson, Trail, B.C., the Consolidated Mining and Smelting Co. of Canada; H. J. Clawson, Hamilton, the Steel Co. of Canada, and Dr. Eugene Forsey of the Canadian Congress of Labor.

KEYNOTE ADDRESS

President Raymond Dupuis of Montreal will give the keynote address at the Tuesday luncheon.

Tuesday evening the B.C. government will give a dinner to delegates at which Premier Bennett will be the speaker.

On Wednesday morning a panel on taxation and government spending will be conducted under the chairmanship of J. Douglas Gibson of Toronto.

Speakers will be Prof. John Deutsch of the University of British Columbia; H. R. MacMillan, Vancouver, president of MacMillan & Bloedel Ltd.; and J. Harvey Perry, Toronto, director of the Canadian Tax Foundation; and Mrs. G. W. Kissick, Vancouver, president of the National Council of Women of Canada.

At the Wednesday luncheon, delegates will hear Philip Talbot of Washington, D.C., president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

Thursday morning there will be a discussion on citizenship and immigration with R. M. Campbell of Toronto presiding. Speakers will be Walter C.

Koerner, Vancouver, director of the Alaska Pine & Cellulose Co., Ltd.; L. W. Luke, secretary-manager, Sudbury and District Chamber of Commerce; Philip Bird of the federal department of citizenship and immigration.

In the afternoon there will be a panel on "responsibilities of freedom" chaired by W. G. Miller of Montreal. Speakers include Marcel Faibault, Montreal; Grant McConachie, president, Canadian Pacific Air Lines, and W. J. Sheridan, manager of the Canadian chamber's department of economic development.

The conference winds up on Thursday evening with the annual dinner.

Linen Imports Threaten Cotton Trade

Canadian cotton manufacturers are seriously threatened by the import of cheap linen goods from abroad, H. Roy Crabtree, vice-chairman of the executive council of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, said here today.

"Our share of the Canadian market has dropped to 46 per cent this year," said Mr. Crabtree, president of the Woods Manufacturing Company in Montreal.

"In 1956 we had a 52 per cent share of the market and between 1929 and 1939 our average share was 78 per cent."

ASK FOR TARIFF

For that reason, he said, Canadian cotton manufacturers have appealed to the federal government to raise the tariff on imported textiles.

"Most of the competition comes from Japan and India but we also have to contend with imports from the United Kingdom."

"There is already a low tariff on these imports but wage rates in Canada are high and unless the tariff is raised we shall have to contend with a very serious situation before long."

Bank Rate Boost Planned by Ireland

DUBLIN (AP)—The Republic of Ireland Sunday announced an increase of 6 per cent from 5 in the bank rate in the fight against inflation. The rise, which follows an increase to 7 per cent from 5 in Britain, is effective today.

Economic 'Dynamism' in Danger

Canada's present fiscal policy, the "so-called tight money" policy, could make Canadian investors unduly conservative if it continues too long, D. L. Morrell, Montreal general manager of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, said here today.

The policy, said Mr. Morrell, "could take some of the dynamism out of the economy and give rise to an unduly conservative psychology."

He warned in his report to delegates to the 28th annual convention of the chamber here that if prices "are not amenable to tight money treatment the continuation of such a policy will prove difficult to defend."

"Also, it remains to be seen whether the consequences of inflation will prove politically acceptable—for example, how much unemployment will Canadians accept in the interest of halting inflation and stable currency?"

"It would seem, however, that monetary and fiscal policies imposed as check-reins on excessive economic expansion are having their effect."

"These efforts to contain inflation are not by any means confined to Canada. Governments in the United States and in Europe, frightened by the spectre of inflation, have taken similar steps."

A current easing in the pace of business has been accompanied by an easing in some of the sources of inflationary pressure, Mr. Morrell said.

"While consumer prices continue to move up, due to higher food costs, wholesale prices have been relatively steady and some components have shown declines."

"There are, it is true, evidences of inflationary pressures still at work—as reflected in the high volume of imports."

He said momentum built up over the past couple of years still is evident in "non-residential construction, service and distributive trades, mining and selected manufacturing industries."

"In others, such as house building, logging and lumbering and a number of manufacturing industries, activity is well below the recent peaks."

Mr. Morrell said that because of the temporary slackening of the annual rate of growth in national production in 1957, "there is bound to be uncertainty about near-term prospects."

"Contributing to the uncertainty are such factors as a noticeable weakening in the export markets for important Canadian commodities and a decline in prices of many basic materials; cautious inventory policies in both Canada and the United States; many plants operating at less than capacity; an indication that the labor force is rising faster than the rate of absorption by industry; severe pressure on profits due to the cost-price squeeze and, in the case of export industries, due to the premium on the Canadian dollar."

Mr. Morrell said that despite the uncertainties, industry is displaying a good deal of confidence, "as evidenced by the fact that capital investment shows continuing strength."

"The early estimate for 1957 of $8,500,000,000 was revised upwards at mid-year and current estimates centre on a figure of $8,800,000,000."

"And this total—is in the face of a marked decline in residential construction. With the government making more money available for housing there could be a moderate increase in this field, carrying over into next year."

Mr. Morrell said that despite the uncertainties, industry is displaying a good deal of confidence, "as evidenced by the fact that capital investment shows continuing strength."

'La Belle Victoria, C'Est Magnifique'

Cries of "magnifique" were heard from French-Canadian delegates steaming into Victoria's inner harbor in brilliant sunshine Sunday afternoon to attend the Canadian Chamber of Commerce convention.

"This is breath-taking," commented Raymond Dupuis, bilingual president of the Canadian Chamber. "The cruise from Vancouver is a dream and your harbor on such a day as this is a joy to behold."

Two special trains from Toronto and Montreal brought more than 500 delegates and their wives to Vancouver Sunday morning.

They were welcomed on the platform by Hugh Stephen, president of the Victoria Chamber; directors Conway Parrott and Forrest L. Shaw and managing secretary Arnold Webb.

The visitors then embarked for Victoria aboard two CPR steamers, the Princess Joan and the Princess Patricia. The Patricia was put in service specially to handle the extra numbers.

One of the busier delegates to the chamber meeting is Tom Flood, manager of the Stratford, Ont., Chamber of Commerce which has tabled eight resolutions for discussion.

They range from a national health scheme and commonwealth relations to a motion picture for a study of human resources in Canada.

"We are also seeking chamber support for the annual Shakespearean Festival at Stratford," Mr. Flood said.

CRUMPET CURTAIN TO CRASH

Theme of the entertainment schedule arranged by Victoria Chamber of Commerce, as host to delegates attending the annual meeting of the Canadian Chamber is "Crashing the Crumpet Curtain."

"We aim to emphasize the difference between Victoria and all the other cities where chamber conventions have been held," said managing secretary Arnold Webb. "The crumpet curtain" theme has been carried into every phase of the recreational program from the Norris cartoons printed in the social program to special table decorations emphasizing Victoria's quaint Old English atmosphere.

KNOW CANADA, JAYCEE URGES

The promotion of Canadianism, "making ourselves more aware of the shaping of this great country in which we live," was urged today by Douglas A. Fisher of Aurora, Ont., president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Canada.

Mr. Fisher was addressing the 28th annual meeting of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

He said it was with the thought in mind of moulding "a generation of men desirous of a true Canadian spirit" that the Junior Chamber began last July to prepare for Canada's centennial in 1967.

Plant Entries Guarded As Banknotes Printed

Printing of Canadian banknotes and postage stamps for the Canadian government is the business of D. M. Coolican, president of the Canadian Bank Note Co. Ltd., of Ottawa.

"Ours is probably the most closely-guarded business in the world," said Mr. Coolican, a delegate to the Canadian Chamber convention here.

"We have to have two guards on duty at every entrance to the plant and every one of the 400 printers we employ is subject to close security."

CHAMBER SIDELIGHTS

Madam Albert Dupuis, mother of the president of the Chamber of Commerce, is taking part in the 28th annual meeting here.

A miniature rodeo was staged in Calgary for the benefit of 350 eastern delegates travelling out to Victoria.

Members of the Victoria Chamber say former president G. Fitzpatrick (Pat) Dunn, was mainly responsible for bringing the national convention to Victoria.

The buffet supper given by the city of Victoria at the Crystal Garden Sunday night cost $2,100. "It was certainly not an expensive function," commented a member of the Victoria Chamber said, and our local sports will be glad to hear that no liquor was served."

Reginald Stone, popular Victoria radio personality, received a big hand for his selections during the meal.

Expelled Unions Welcome if Red Leaders Dropped

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tom Alsbury, vice-president of the Vancouver Labor Council, is ready to welcome back members of B.C.'s three expelled Communist-led unions—without their leaders.

He was commenting on a statement by Bill Black, president of the B.C. Federation of Labor, calling for a complete review of sentences imposed on Communist-led unions in Canada.

Mr. Alsbury said "Red leaders always promote disunity as they did when they took the outside civil workers, the fishermen and mine-mill workers out the front door of the Canadian labor movement."

"The door is always open for those unions to come back—without their leaders."

Mr. Black said a second look should be taken at the suspensions "in the interests of the unity of labor."

GOVERNMENT at JOHNSON

the buffet supper given by the city council, to Canadian Chamber delegates Sunday night.

Cost of the supper, which consisted entirely of cold dishes with no liquor is estimated at $2,100. This expenditure has been protested by many local citizens.

"We have the honor of being the first city in Canada ever to complain at having to entertain our guests," said one member.

"It is unfortunate that the reports of our meanness travelled so far that some of our guests have stayed away from this function tonight.

"Quite obviously they don't want to accept hospitality that is grudgingly given—especially when our revenue from their visit will probably be in the neighborhood of $100,000."

500 ATTEND

Those who stayed away must have been few, for the Crystal Garden was crowded and at least 500 lined up for the tasty cold fare provided.

Mayor Percy Scurrell extended a warm civic welcome and urged any visitors who might be looking for sites for light industry to consider Victoria.

He enlarged on the sweetness of Victoria's climate and general living conditions, and said: "Although we do not pretend we are in a position to attract heavy industry, we do feel we can accommodate a number of light or secondary industries—and we have the room to take care of them and any added population they may bring."

BEST CONVENTION CITY

"Close to the city we have Patricia Bay Airport, and already one large aviation firm has found it advantageous to locate its Pacific Coast operations there."

Raymond Dupuis, president of the Canadian Chamber, returned the mayor's welcome in French and English by stating: "There is no finer convention city anywhere than Victoria."

A swimming display put on by the YMCA swimming club and the physical and recreational training staff at HMCS Naden was enthusiastically applauded.

Keen spectators were Jack Pembroke, CBE, president of the Royal Trust Co., Montreal, and H. Roy Crabtree, chairman and president of Woods Manufacturing Co. Ltd., Montreal.

Mr. Pembroke was deputy minister of national defence in Ottawa during the war. He is national chairman of the Victorian Order of Nurses and chairman of the Canadian Chamber's policy committee.

HUNDREDS of Canadian Chamber delegates lined up for a cold buffet supper at the civic reception Sunday night. Waitress Hazel Regimbal

McCONACHIE REVEALS

Edmonton-Amsterdam Air Service Planned

Canadian Pacific Airlines has applied for a licence to operate a direct air service between Edmonton, Alta., and Amsterdam, Holland, CPA president Grant McConachie revealed here today.

"We are confident this line offers a large potential in trans-Atlantic air travel," said the burly 48-year-old executive, here to attend the annual meeting of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

Mr. McConachie is well pleased with the new CPA service opened recently between Montreal and Lisbon and Madrid.

He said six Bristol Britannia aircraft on order from Britain will be used on CPA's polar route from Vancouver to Amsterdam and on the service to the Orient.

He said the service between Vancouver and Amsterdam has exceeded CPA's expectations and is well booked into next year.

He takes pride in the fact that CPA is a $40,000,000 corporation which still operates bush planes along with its international service.

A hefty, energetic figure, McConachie became an airline president at the age of 22 when Independent Airways Ltd. was formed. By 1947 he was president of CPA.

$35 Registration Fee Covers All Functions

Registration fee at the Chamber of Commerce convention is $35, which includes all functions. But local members may sign up for one day only at a reduced charge.

The awards were presented by president Raymond Dupuis of Montreal.

The 1957 graduates are: William J. Duignan, Toronto, assistant director, department of travel and publicity; Donald M. McClymont, Ottawa, manager, Ottawa Board of Trade; Andre Cornellier, Montreal, Quebec manager, the Canadian Chamber of Commerce; Keith Nettleton, New Westminster, manager, New Westminster Board of Trade; Anne Drblak, Montreal, Montreal Board of Trade; Mayes Mackenzie, Truro, N.S., secretary-treasurer, Truro Board of Trade; Austin Jelbert, Timmins, Ont., secretary-manager, Porcupine Chamber of Commerce; Mrs. Olive H. NATIONAL CONVENTION 'RUNNING LIKE WATCH'

Praise for Victoria Chamber of Commerce—now acting as host to more than 700 delegates and wives attending the annual meeting of the Canadian Chamber—was voiced today by head office officials.

"I have never seen a convention more smoothly organized," said C. H. Schofield, assistant general manager of the national body.

"I have been here since last Wednesday assisting with preparations for the conference and there have been no headaches at all.

"Everything ticks off like a well-oiled watch."

Two men who have borne a large share of the burden in organizing the Canadian Chamber of Commerce convention here are Arnold Webb, manager of the host city's Chamber, and Herbert Schofield, assistant general manager of the Canadian Chamber.

Tories 'Disaster' Says U.K. Labor

BRIGHTON, England (C) — The Labor party, clamoring for a general election, charged today that the Conservative government has brought Britain to the brink of economic disaster.

Some 1,300 delegates to the annual conference here, elated by a series of successes at special parliamentary elections, unanimously adopted a resolution criticizing the economic policy of Prime Minister Macmillan's government.

The resolution charged that the government has directly contributed to "inflation, ever rising prices, loss of gold and other reserves and to the recent speculation against the pound. It was carried with roars of approval.

Harold Wilson, 41-year-old financial expert of the party, made a bitter attack on the government.

He declared: "As chancellor Mr. Macmillan was a great bookmaker turned pawnbroker. He finally put us in pawn to the United States and Germany."

Wilson sharply attacked the increase in Britain's bank credit rate—to seven from five per cent—announced recently by Chancellor of the Exchequer Thorneycroft as a weapon to fight inflation.

Frank Cousins, secretary-general of the powerful Transport and General Workers' Union, denounced what he called the government's "big lie technique" against the trade unions.

He said the unions—the Labor party's financial backbone—had been blamed for causing Britain's inflation troubles by making wage demands.

Party chairman Margaret Herbison opened the conference with a call for the creation of a Middle East "cool area" to prevent conflict between Russia and the West.

I was a bundle of nerves

My nerves were that bad the least little thing set me off. I was irritable, tense, easily depressed, and I slept badly. And as if that wasn't enough, I'd get indigestion.

Many people experience unpleasant feelings because their systems are disturbed by ingredients present in everyday beverages. While some people can drink tea, coffee, cocoa and some soft drinks without harm, others cannot.

Postum contains no tannin to interfere with digestion; no caffeine, theophylline and theobromine which can cause nervousness, sleeplessness, irritability, palpitations, rapid pulse, followed by depression.

There is no need to endure any of these unpleasant feelings. Switch to Instant Postum which is guaranteed to contain no stimulants or drugs. Postum does not taste or act like ordinary beverages, but has a comforting flavor of its own. Make Postum easily, instantly, right in your cup. Just add freshly boiling water, stir and enjoy.

'Tortured' Girl Turns Up Safe

MONTREAL (CP)—Maureen Hurst, 14, feared the victim of torture, returned unharmed Sunday night to her home in suburban Greenfield Park after a hitch-hiking trip to Windsor, Ont.

She was located in Windsor Saturday night, two days after her mother received a telephone call from an unidentified man who said he was torturing the girl by burning her legs with cigarettes while her girl friend screamed.

Maureen disappeared last Monday night with her girl friend, Carol Alaske, also 14. She said Carol stayed on in Windsor to look for a job when she came home by train.

Meanwhile police say they have received reports from other parents about an anonymous telephone caller who says he has kidnapped their children and is torturing them.

In most cases the caller says it will be worse for his victims if their parents do not give him a letter from a Mr. or Mrs. Frazer or Fisher.

So far all the calls have proved without foundation.

CANADA-U.S. BOUNDARY IN DOUBT!

MONTPELIER, Vt. (BUP)—Attorney-General Frederick Reed said today he was checking the treaty of 1842 between the U.S. and Britain to determine the international boundary between Canada and Vermont.

Reed's action stems from the erection of a barbed wire barricade strung along a 200-foot length of dirt road between the two areas.

The barrier was erected this weekend by Montpelier Paul Di Paolo, who objected that Vermont Route 105-A from Richford to East Richford edged into Canada for 200 feet because of terrain.

In expressing the first objection to the situation in 115 years, Di Paolo said "I want to live in peace with my neighbors."

Tax Experts Hit Load Put On Forest Industry

VANCOUVER (CP)—The provincial government's taxation load on the British Columbia forestry industry came in for sharp criticism at a conference attended here by 150 experts from within and outside the industry.

The criticisms covered aspects from the government's tax on logging profits to the government's approach to the industry.

The basis of the discussion, at the day-long conference Saturday at the University of B.C., sponsored by the Canadian Tax Foundation, was a 300-page report entitled "Forest Tenures and Taxes in Canada" by Toronto economist A. Milton Moore.

The report is a detailed examination of forest management and other systems in the 10 provinces, their degree of success and the tax structure affecting the industry in each province.

While the government's tax policy came under fire, the report, too, was criticized. William Veitch, provincial assistant deputy finance minister in charge of taxation, said "the forest industry has been making good profits until quite recently. I find it difficult to agree that the tax load is that burdensome."

Charlie Keeps Gorge in Front

Gorge Hotel ran into an unexpected soccer storm at Topaz Park Sunday, but managed to stay above water as burly Charlie Constable tossed out a three-goal anchor.

Buffed by a hustling Heaney's club, which was shooting for its first victory of the season, Gorge salvaged a 3-3 draw and a share of the Victoria and District Football League lead as Constable rammed in all the Gorge tallies.

In Sunday's other matches, Kickers went down to their third successive defeat, losing, 4-2, to Esquimalt at Central Park, and Punjab United thumped Butler Bros., 6-1, at Heywood Avenue.

SCOTS MOVE UP

Saturday, Canadian Scottish moved up into a first place tie by whipping Brodies Bakery, 5-2 at Heywood Avenue while the pace-setting Tilliums were being held to a 3-3 draw at Canadian Hungarians at Royal Athletic Park.

Heaney grabbed an early lead on Tony Chapp's tally in Sunday's feature tussle, but Constable ended the count at 40 minutes and came back quickly for his second marker to give Gorge a 2-1 lead at the half.

The bustling forward made it 3-1 after 10 minutes of the second session but saw the two-goal lead wiped out as Frank Greeley tallied on penalty shot and Stu Walker fired the final marker with only two minutes remaining.

The one point lifted Gorge into a tie with the Scots and Theories It Seems, Just Don't Belong on a Track

By CENTAUR

There are all sorts of theories about horse racing and, like school-book proverbs most of them contradict each other.

Take, for example, the saying that a horse will always run back to his last race.

In the featured seventh race at Sandown Park Saturday, Arioso did just that, duplicating his win over Champagne to beat such stars as Li-G-Bo, Mazur and Junando and pay $2.70 for $2.

Then go back to the fourth race and see what Wheatlander did. He won his last race in fine style, coming from behind to catch the leaders at a mile and 70 yards to win going away.

Saturday he was in the same type of field at a longer distance and could do no better than third.

"VO FOR PARENT

Apart from the glorious weather and the happy smiles of the few who bet the almost never-ending stream of the long-prices who came in, the feature of the day was the success of a young apprentice jockey, G. Parent who had two mounts and rode two winners to bat 100 per cent.

The boy brought in Arden Does Too, who beat Wheatlander, and Rorrie Bay in the eighth. The Arden horse, incidentally, broke his maiden in that race at a mile and 5/8, something of a rarity.

The Beaufighter filly, Brighton Queen seems to have taken to this track. For the third time she upset the form, either by winning or figuring in the quinella for a big payoff.

Saturday, under Ron Williams she beat the highly-favored Steven C to pay off at $29.60.

TRACK RECORD

If it means anything, a new track record was established in the sixth race when Text, the favorite, ran the mile and 5/8 in 2:21 and 2:5. He was one of only three short-priced horses who won, the others being Nita's Boy in the first at $6 and Rorrie Bay in the eighth.

You can throw out the running of the third race won by R. "Longshot" Loghry on Frisky I'm It. An outsider, Eddy Reader, took the whole field wide of the first turn.

George Did, whom most people had backed was included and thereafter continued his tendency to drift out and finished out of the money.

The winner paid the day's top price, $43.20.

CANT BLAME TRACK
None of the upsets Saturday can be blamed on the track. It is in excellent condition and there hasn't been a spill in nine days of racing.

Saturday between 5:50 and 6:00 people were there and they bet approximately 32 per cent more than on the corresponding day last year.

BATTLE ROYAL WRAPS UP GRID CLASH IN ILLINOIS

CARBONDALE, Ill. (AP)—Fighting erupted at the end of a football game Saturday between Arkansas State College of Jonesboro and Southern Illinois University, which has six Negro starters.

Fighting started among players on the field, then both benches joined in and about 400 spectators were involved before the coaches of two schools, officials, police and the SIU band combined to break it up.

The battle was brief and no injuries were reported. Arkansas State won 13-6.

No one could say which players started the fighting and no one could pinpoint any incident which started it.

Karl Gives Colin His Best Surprise

NANAIMO (Special)—With the first day of practice under their belts Victoria Cougars have given manager Colin Kilburn a pleasant surprise with their excellent condition.

Kilburn, manager-coach of the Western Hockey League Club, stated that the team may not have any super-stars in its ranks, but that it should be one of the better-balanced teams in the circuit this season.

One of the standouts in Kilburn's opinion was defenceman Karl Kaiser, who reported to the team at a hard-packed 205 pounds, 20 pounds lighter than when he reported to Vancouver Canucks for last season's training sessions.

Cougars went out for callisthenics and limbering-up exercises with only 13 men stripped Sunday.

TORN TENDONS
Warren Bach, 185-pound, 6'1" defenceman assigned by the Boston Bruins, reported to town Saturday with torn tendons in his knee and will be under treatment by club physician Dr. Reg White until the middle of the week.

Expected to arrive Wednesday is Nelson Bulloch, defenceman with the club for the last three years, as well as Fred Brown, recent acquisition from Vancouver via the trading route.

Apparently ready for a good season, after having trouble with an injured knee last year, was Gordie Wilson, one of Kilburn's key centres.

Kilburn said he hoped to be able to announce shortly the Cougars' purchase of a right winger.

"ONE OF BEST"
Not mentioning any names, Kilburn stated, "He is one of the best right wingers presently in the WHL and can be counted on to produce a point a game for the club. I can't tell you who he is until the deal is confirmed."

Cougars are planning an exhibition game with the Nanaimo Clippers Saturday at 8:30 p.m. in Nanaimo and Kilburn is expecting some of the Hub City team to turn out for practices during the week.

Practices are being held every day from 9 to 10:30 in the morning and from 1 to 2 in the afternoon with visitors welcome to sit in and watch.

FAVORITE CLIPS
SPOKANE (AP)—Favored Vanderbar sloshed through the mud to win the $1,000 Opportunity Purse, feature race at Playfair Saturday. Pere El Dono was second and Silverado third.

Civil Servants Back Health Plan

B.C. government employees agreed Saturday to a government plan for a health insurance scheme for all provincial civil servants.

At a meeting Saturday, the membership passed amendments to its constitution permitting it to enter into an agreement with the government.

This will enable the plan to cover all 12,000 government employees with prepaid medicine instead of restricting the scheme to members of the B.C. Government Employees' Association.

The meeting agreed to a government proposal that the government pay 50 per cent of the cost of a health scheme already operated by the civil servants, provided employees not in the association are covered and the government gets 50 per cent representation on the scheme's board of directors.

The BCGEA requested a meeting with the government this week to ratify the plan.

One of London's great museums, the Victoria and Albert, was opened in 1852.

2,800 FEDERAL SERVANTS SEEK BARGAIN RIGHTS

Bargaining rights are sought by 2,800 federal civil servants in B.C.

District convention here of Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada Saturday sent a resolution asking its national executive to press the government for bargaining rights.

The 12,000-member national organization is expected to merge next spring with the 15,000 members of the Civil Service Association of Ottawa to form a single body representing federal employees.

THROUGH THE MILL Poor Lighthouse Conditions Told

A protest against working conditions imposed on lighthouse keepers and assistants was supported by a Greater Victoria couple that have been through the mill.

Mr. and Mrs. Keith Douglas, 3366C Anchorage, backed the district convention of the Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada, which Saturday set up a special committee to investigate the situation and served notice that a parliamentary investigation may be asked.

The couple last year ended a year-and-a-half stint on the remote Carmanah light.

Mrs. Douglas said main hardships were poor pay and refusal of the federal government to designate assistants as federal employees, resulting in 84-hour weeks throughout the year without any paid holidays.

Food deliveries at more remote sites sometimes are made only every six months but now freezers are supplied, she said.

Tories Seek Tax Exemption On Bond Sales

Federal help to municipalities by exempting income tax on bond sales was urged by the Saanich Progressive Conservative Association at a recent meeting.

Provincial Conservative leader Deane Finlayson told the meeting that if the party succeeds in sending 12 to 15 members to Ottawa from B.C. at the next federal election it could offer a strong alternative to the Social Credit government in a provincial election.

CBC Warns of Crackdown On 'Giveaway' Programs

OTTAWA (CP)—The CBC board of governors, tightening up on broadcast giveaway programs with a commercial angle, today cautioned that formal regulation may be necessary if programs do not meet certain standards.

In public statement, the board said it feels that broadcasters should not produce such programs if contestants are required to pay money or show proof that they have purchased a sponsor's product.

It also said broadcasters should refrain from giveaway programs "unless the participants are present in the broadcasting studio and take part in the broadcast concerned, or entries are made in writing with arrangements for consideration on merit of all such entries."

Police Crack Robbery Racket

TORONTO (CP)—Police say they have uncovered a racket in which delivery boys took turns to be robbers and robbed. They said the boys allowed themselves to be robbed and later divided the loot with older youths. Six were arrested.

Labor Probe Ordered

LONDON (UP)—British Labor Minister Ian McLeod Saturday ordered an inquiry into a labor dispute at the De Havilland Aircraft Company that threatened to tie up British airlines.

BIRD HOLDS KEY TO WEDLOCK
VENTURA, Calif. (AP)—Mrs. Audrey Martin says her parakeet backs up her testimony that her husband, Albert, ignored her.

In obtaining a divorce on grounds of mental cruelty, Mrs. Martin told the judge that toward the end of their 25 years of wedlock Albert would rarely speak to her. She said she would repeatedly ask him: "Did you hear me, Albert?" She said she sought a divorce after her parakeet learned a new line. His favorite saying, she said, now is, "Did you hear me, Albert?"

'TV Squint' Hits Children In Britain
LONDON (UP)—British children are suffering from a new complaint—"TV squint." Dr. Cyril Cormac, principal school medical officer for Lincolnshire, reported that the number of squint-eyed schoolchildren in Britain is steadily growing. Television, he added, "is partly to blame." In his annual report on the health of children, Dr. Cormac said in 1949 there were 60 children out of 12,500 examined who suffered from squint. In 1955, that number was up to 113 and last year it was 185.

"When a child has been at school all day using his eyes to read and write it is reasonable to think that staring at a screen in a dim or dark room will strain the eyes unduly," Dr. Cormac said. "I do not suggest children should not be allowed to look at television," he added. "But care should be taken to adjust viewing conditions so there is as little eyestrain as possible."

The ministry of education, concerned at the steady increase in squint-eyed children, has ordered an investigation.

Young Danes Panicked Over Hormone Scare
COPENHAGEN (UP)—Disturbed males Saturday started a rush of inquiries to medical authorities here to find out if they were suffering from "hormone poisoning" and losing their virility.

The stir followed a report by a Danish doctor that even breathing of particles of female hormones could cause impotency in males and also bring on female characteristics. Dr. Christian Hamburger, internationally known hormone expert, reported that male scientists doing laboratory work here with female hormones developed breasts, lost their beards and became impotent. All were later "cured."

He also warned that health authorities recently prohibited the use of hormones for caponizing because the treated fowl when eaten could cause temporary impotency.

U.S. Race Riots Only World News for Russ
NEW YORK (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, returning Sunday after a visit to the Soviet Union, said the Little Rock integration crisis "was the only piece of world news that appeared in the Communist newspapers." Asked what comment the Russians made on the situation, she replied: "They said exactly what happened. There was no comment of any kind."

Jazzed-Up Hymn Scores in Church

MANCHESTER, England (AP)—Feet tapped and members of the congregation rocked Sunday to the hot rhythm of church music set to jazz tempos.

"The music tonight is a little unusual," said Rev. A. Gower-Jones of the Church of England.

Beside the choir was a trap drummer, two guitarists, a hot fiddle player and the church's regular organist, swinging a hymn.

"It is difficult to change the music in church," said the minister, "but if the church is to be alive—then changes must be made."

The experiment took place at the Church of Our Lady of Mercy and St. Thomas of Canterbury.

"It was a tremendous success," the minister said today, "so successful that we are going to do a repeat on Nov. 3."

"I prefer the old-fashioned style of service," said 41-year-old Mrs. Florence Harker. "However, I agree that this does appeal to the younger people and they should be catered for."

The minister said that a number of the older members of the congregation also liked the jazz service.

"The only criticisms I heard,"

TURBULENT, ICE-TOSSING WATERS of Magpie Rock in Bellot Strait are captured on canvas by artist Commander Anthony Law, DSC, RCN, executive officer of Arctic patrol ship

HMCS Labrador, after the ship's initial transit of the channel. Bellot Strait proved to be the practical link in man's search for a feasible Northwest Passage for deep-draft vessels.

ARCTIC CONSTANT INSPIRATION

Officer-Artist Combines Careers in Canada's North

The north is many things to many men. To some, it is an Arctic waste. To others, it is one of the last unexplored bastions of the uncivilized world. To most, it is a place where life is a battle and living an existence.

But to Commander Anthony Law, RCN, the lands and waters north of continental North America are part of a familiar world, an integral part of his career, and a source for expressing his avocation.

The commander's mother, Mrs. Adrian Law, resides at 908 St. Charles St., Victoria.

Commander Law is executive officer of the Arctic patrol ship HMCS Labrador currently concluding her fourth consecutive cruise in the north since her commissioning in 1952. It is Commander Law's second cruise aboard.

He joined the ship in November, 1955.

During the current summer season of Arctic navigation, the Labrador contributed two major discoveries to man's knowledge of the north. The first is the finding of a deeper, wider, shorter and safer channel in the approaches to Frobisher Bay, Baffin Island. Second is the Labrador's confirmation of the Bellot Strait channel, permitting a practical key transit for deep draft vessels effecting a Northwest Passage.

Joint Operation

Both of these accomplishments resulted during the ship's participation in Arctic operations conducted jointly by the United States and Canada and directed by the U.S. Navy's Military Sea Transportation Service.

The Frobisher and Bellot

Strait events are recorded in oils, painted by Commander Law when shipboard duties permitted.

A native of Quebec City, Commander Law early in life decided to be an artist. He began to paint seriously in 1935, studying under such contemporary greats as Franklin Bronner, Frank Varley, and Frank Hennessey.

In 1936 he exhibited his first one-man show in Quebec City at the age of 20. The following year the Royal Canadian Academy accepted one of his paintings. He also won the Jessie Dow Award for the best painting in the Montreal Art Association Spring Show in 1937. Each succeeding year his works were presented in one-man shows.

When the Second World War broke out, Anthony Law was serving in the army as a captain commanding No. 1 Ordnance and Ammunition Company, Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps. In 1940 he transferred to the navy and was sent overseas, where he commanded motor torpedo boats throughout the war years. Mentioned a number of times in official dispatches he was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross as a result of actions off Normandy during the 1944 invasion of France.

At war's end in 1945, he was appointed official naval war artist. Paintings executed at this time are owned by the National Art Gallery of Canada.

Keeps Up Studies

Commander Law maintains his interest in art and continues to study while in service. When the press of duties permitted, he conducted art classes for officers and men aboard HMCS Magnificent. An exhibition of his students' works was organized and displayed upon the "Maggie's" return to Canada after a four-month cruise in 1952.

The Labrador's commitments in the north are arduous and valuable. Under command of Captain Thomas C. Pullen, RCN, the ship already has entered ice-choked waters that have seen no vessel other than Eskimo kayaks since the days of early Arctic explorers.

Held Two Shows

A show of watercolors, including Mediterranean scenes, is displayed in the Victoria Art Gallery.

B.C. Electric today asked for a special meeting with city council public works committee on the proposal to re-route Haultain buses.

Council earlier proposed the bus be taken off Haultain and routed along Bay Street. Residents of Haultain have objected to buses shaking their homes. Bay Street has been widened and re-surfaced recently.

In a letter to council, BCER vice-president E. W. Arnott suggested some alternative routes should be considered.

Donald H. Gray, 855 Fort, was sentenced in city police court today to three years in B.C. Penitentiary after he pleaded guilty to a charge of breaking and entering.

Gray broke into Moore-Whittington Lumber Co. Ltd. Sept. 11 and stole paint, brushes and saws worth a total value of more than $1,000.

Albert Dobbins, Victoria, pleaded guilty in city police court today to theft of a portable radio, electric razor and pictures from a room in the Drake Hotel, 1405 Store, Saturday night.

Dobbins was remanded to Wednesday for sentence.

Two weekend thefts are being investigated by police.

A thief climbed through a rear bathroom window at the home of William Payne, 1125 Johnson, Sunday morning to collect two toothbrushes, a grey workshirt, one pair of socks and a set of feeler gauges. Williamson's Photo Store, 640 Fort, was robbed of an Asahi Japanese camera, valued at $100, Sunday at approximately 3 a.m.

District Council of Carpenters will meet Saturday in Nanaimo.

FIRST CONTACT TODAY IN GLAZIERS' DISPUTE

First contact between the two sides in the 10-week-old strike of 26 city glaziers was expected today. Don Bushell, business agent for Local 1163, Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, was expected to meet with a management official of Canadian Pittsburgh Industries in Vancouver.

CPI is one of three strike-bound firms here. The others are O'Neil Glass and Paint Ltd. and Pacific Glass Ltd.

Meanwhile, the union resumed picketing today of a three-storey building under construction at View and Broad after a Supreme Court judge refused to grant an injunction against the picket line sought by the owner of the building, Huron and Erie Mortgage Corporation.

A-Bomb Horror Set for Display In CD Day Show

By JOHN MIKA

Broken bones, open abdominal injuries, battered heads, severe burns and lots of bleeding wounds.

Those are the harsh realities of an atomic attack or natural disaster such as an earthquake.

Greater Victoria Civil Defence Corps will have the job of coping with them if and when the time comes.

Just how this will be done will be shown to the public with grim realism Friday—Canada's first national CD Day—in Bay Street Armoury. In charge of the display of advanced treatment and casualty clearing is Dr. Elizabeth Mahaffy, Victoria-Esquamalt medical health officer.

REALISM ASSURED

Some 15 "casualties" with simulated injuries ranging all the way from flash burns to broken bones will pass through these two sections in a live demonstration of what would happen at the scene of a disaster when CD health services went into action.

"The injuries will look real, I can assure you," Dr. Mahaffy said in an interview. "It may be a little grim but we hope that all the displays of various CD services will give the public some idea of what to expect and what it can do."

45-MINUTE SHOW

Demonstrations of the display under their charge will run about 45 minutes and will be repeated during the four-hour exhibition between 7 and 11 p.m.

Deadline Beaters Crowd City Hall

City Hall was one of Victoria's busiest spots today as residents sought to beat deadlines for:

1. Getting on the voters' list, and

2. Avoiding penalties for property tax payments. Despite the flurry of last-minute registrations, it was indicated the Victoria voters' list would be shorter by far than in 1956—at least as far as non-property owner voters are concerned.

Last year there were 2,000 voters in this broad category. It includes resident electors (anyone who has lived here six months) and tenant electors

Nobody in Hurry to Follow Norris as Reeve of Oak Bay

Oak Bay councillors today played it close to the chest on possibility any of them might run for municipal reeve in the December elections.

The present reeve, Fred Norris, has announced he will not run again.

None of the present councillors contacted stated they definitely had the reeve's job in view, but a couple left the door open.

Clr. G. H. G. Mann said "it's a matter of the taxpayers asking me first. If the taxpayers want a man, they should approach him."

Coun. Geoffrey Ellis admitted "I have given it some thought—but we'll don't think I would run for reeve."

Twelve-year council veteran George Murdoch said it was too early to decide if he would again contest the council seat. He was non-committal on the possibility of running for reeve.

Coun. Fred Hawes said he had not yet made any decision whether or not to run again. Senior councillor J. V. Johnson, 34 years on council, will likely pull out.

"I think I've had enough. I don't think I'll run again," he said.

Weather Record Close for City

'Hottest September' Crown Depends on Sunshine Today

Today's weather will decide whether September, 1957, will go into the record books as the hottest in Victoria's history.

Up until Sunday, the mean temperature for the first 29 days of the month has been 60.8 degrees—a tie for the previous high set for the full month in 1943.

"Depending on today, and it looks good, we may set the record when we close our books for the month," weatherman Bill Mackie said.

Normal mean temperature for September is 57.1 degrees.

Except for the odd shower caused by a storm off the California coast sending bands of precipitation to Victoria, the sky is expected to be clear today and the temperature to hover around the 70-degree mark.

Same prediction holds for Tuesday, with lows expected to be around 50.

INDIAN SUMMER BEST

Toting up the statistics for all but the final day of the month, Mr. Mackie concluded this year's Indian summer has been kinder to Victoria than the regular summer season.

"It's been a dandy and it makes up for weather we had in July and August which left much to be desired," he said. "I haven't been the driest month but it has been drier than normal and in the sunshine department we should end up with the third best September on record."

RAINFALL LIGHT

So far there have been 251 hours of sunshine, 41½ more than normal. Precipitation was recorded on five days, three less than usual, for a total of 49 inches compared with the normal of 140 for 30 days.

Driest September occurred in 1918 and 1929 when only .10 precipitation was recorded.

Highest temperature this month was 81.2 degrees, which also set a record for the day.

LCB STAFFS TO COME INTO MEDICAL PLAN

The provincial cabinet took action today to bring some 700 employees of the Liquor Control Board throughout B.C. under provisions of the Public Services Medical Plan Act.

Most of the employees are members of the B.C. Government Employees' Medical Service, which is expected to merge with the government plan Nov. 1.

Banking Hits Summit Despite Tight Money

The banking business is at a high point because the nation is so busy growing, but the tight money situation probably will be around for some time yet, the top man of the Imperial Bank of Canada said here today.

E. J. Friesen, of Toronto, visited his 112th branch in Western Canada today since his appointment as general manager of the bank 15 months ago. "It might be said the nation is in a period of consolidating past gains but I anticipate continued growth will follow," he said.

The cautious banker, who rose from junior clerk to the head of the $850,000,000 institution in 35 years, wouldn't gaze into any crystal ball to predict the money market's future or the probable course of currently rising interest rates.

Dawson Creek Firm to Build Cassiar Road

Second Lowest Bid Accepted by B.C.

Contract for construction of 25.5 miles on the Cassiar-Stewart road was awarded by the Provincial Highways Department today to Piggott Construction Ltd. of Dawson Creek.

A department spokesman said little actual road work can be done in the short construction season period left, but it is planned to carry out considerable clearing of the right-of-way.

Piggott's bid of $1,312,372 was opened at the end of July. Delay in award of the contract was caused by the need to obtain approval of the federal government, which has agreed to pay up to half the estimated total cost of $12,000,000.

REJECTED

The actual low tender of approximately $700,000 was submitted by Wade and Wells Ltd., but the bid was rejected because it was not accompanied by a performance bond. Piggott Construction was next lowest of the nine bids submitted.

Wade and Wells Ltd. was the storm centre of a controversy which flared up in the spring of 1956 over alleged waste in construction of the northern mining assistance road.

Up until that time the work had been done on a no-tender, machinery-rental basis under the department of mines.

CIL Workers Vote to Take 10% Increase

Some 150 workers at the Canadian Industries Ltd. explosives plant on James Island voted to accept a majority recommendation of wage increases averaging 10 per cent.

A. W. Toone, negotiating committee member for Federal 128, Canadian Chemical and Explosives Workers, said today that 98 per cent voted in favor of acceptance at a special meeting Sunday.

A company spokesman today said the majority report is "under study." No decision by the company has been made yet to accept or reject the report.

The majority report recommended wage boosts, retroactive to Sept. 1, equal to 10 per cent of the annual payroll—equivalent to an average 18-cents-an-hour increase. Average wage at present is $1.85.

A union shop also was recommended, as well as a 10-minute daily rest period, one more statutory holiday for a total of nine and three-week vacations after 10 years' service.

A minority report is expected from the employer's nominee.

The union sought increases on a sliding scale ranging from 10 to 25 per cent. The company offered increases of 5 to 6 per cent during the board's hearing.

It Wasn't All Marilyn's Day

TORONTO—The legend is that a wedding is the bride's day—but it wasn't all that way when Marilyn Bell was wed here Saturday.

There was scarcely a dry eye in the house when her husband, Joseph Wesley "Chipper" di Lascio, responded to Gus Ryder's toast to the bride.

With struggling diffidence, his head dropping from time to time as he groped for words, the young American sociologist said:

"There has always been only one girl in the world for me. "Marilyn knows it, and I want my friends to know it—I love her more than any other thing in the world."

These words, spoken with quiet sincerity, reaffirmed what everyone in Toronto is saying—that Marilyn has found herself a wonderful husband, a man uniquely like herself in his modesty, his love of sports, and the compassion inherent in his life's work.

A hard-bitten news photographer said: "The thing I like about it is this: Chipper fell in love with her when she was an unknown, before she swam Lake Ontario. He didn't latch on to a good thing like so many others."

Today the young couple is on a vagabonding motor honeymoon.

Soon they will take up residence in a modest apartment in East Camden, New Jersey, where di Lascio has taken a post as parole officer in New Jersey's highly-regarded correctional system.

Marilyn's great swimming career is over. It shot up, meteor-like, and expended itself in three years—and her family is glad.

"Sure, she could have made a few more bucks, but what's the point?" her father, Syd Bell, told me. "She is doing what she wants to do—marrying and settling down to family life."

A doctor gave her a thorough check-over recently and pronounced her "101 per cent fit," thus effectively laying the ghost of rumors that Lake Ontario, Juan de Fuca and other exacting swims might have damaged her health.

Marilyn was married Saturday—a crisp, sunny Ontario day—from the yellow-brick St. Ambrose Church in suburban Alderwood.

She was married by Father William O'Brien, a handsome young Roman Catholic priest who had instructed her during her conversion to the Roman faith. It was his first marriage ceremony.

The ceremony lasted 15 minutes and was followed by the Latin nuptial mass, which took another half-hour.

Four press photographers and two newsreel cameramen recorded the ceremony.

At one point, during the solemn exchange of vows, a priest appeared to move a large basket of flowers obstructing the view of a cameraman behind the chancel.

Cliff Lumsdon, who acted as an usher, was a near casualty. Kneeling on a marble step during the mass, Lumsdon appeared to weave and seemed on the point of toppling over.

The groom's father stepped forward, handed him a handkerchief, and helped him back to a chair.

"I thought I was going to faint," Lumsdon said later.

Gus Ryder, watching the incident from a sixth-row pew, seemed amused. "He ought to be in better shape," he quipped.

Maria Brenk, who was in Victoria with Marilyn last summer, was maid of honor. After the wedding, a restricted list of about 75 guests adjourned to the Old Mill, a well-known restaurant in West Toronto, to toast the newlyweds in champagne.

Marilyn said she was "thrilled" by the ceremony taking place in Beacon Hill Park and said she thought it was a "wonderful gesture" on the part of the people of Victoria.

TOPICS OF THE DAY

A wasp flew in his car window, stung him soundly and caused him to lose control, John Saint, John Dean Road, Saanichton, told police after his car crashed into a pole at 1.45 p.m. Saturday.

Mr. Saint, who had been driving on East Saanich Road near Central Saanich north boundary, was taken to Resthaven Hospital, Sidney, where he was treated for a fractured finger and head abrasions.

City of Victoria got more than its money's worth in a $1,500 daffodil bulb deal. J. W. Howroyd and son Joe, 1710 Mortimer, provided 33,000 bulbs by agreement, then donated two truck loads.

The bulbs will turn Beacon Hill waterfront into a field of gold for centennial year.

The first model plane contest in Victoria for over five years was held at Lansdowne field on Sunday.

Thirty-one members of the Victoria Model Airplane League under contest director D. P. Collis, 1085 Nicholson, competed for trophies and merchandise awards.

First place in the combat and stunt events went to Le6 Kallia of Port Alberni and Ken Day of Courtenay won the 200-lap final.

Inexpensive Recreation? Badminton's Your Answer

By PENNY SAVER

The score is now 15 to 12. The loser? Why Penny Saver, of course. Why? 'Cause she forgot to take out her membership at the badminton club this season. Oh, poor Penny!

It looks as if she'll play her badminton by remote control this winter... through this column.

So, how about an early start. Who's for a game of badminton?

What a racket this racket business is! Why go and spend $3.50 on having your racket restringed, when I can tell you where it can be done for $2.75? OK, be stubborn 'bout it, but the $2.75 job is just as good. No foolin'!

Among other things, your small son will undoubtedly arrive home some day from school and demand a badminton racket. Schools are encouraging this fine sport.

Special rackets for students are in town now, imported from Belgium. They have strong wooden shafts and are strung with nylon. Complete with laminated head, these rackets come at $2.75 and $3.95, according to their size.

Another import is the steel shafted Pakistan racket with strong nylon strings and a leather handle at the amazing price of $5.95. Good buy? You bet.

Famous names in badminton goods are of course any player's best investment. The steel shafts, calf skin grips and nylon braid string, add up to the very best. And nothing but the best for you, my friend. Prices range from $8.95 to $9.95.

Honk, honk! Don't be surprised if your shuttlecock suddenly starts calling to you, because these European-made "birds" are made of goose feathers. They are selling at three for 95 cents.

Most clubs insist that members wear their "whites" on the courts, and woe betide you if you don't.

With this in mind (and a bit of a guilty conscience left over from last season) I've been looking at shorts.

Men, white cotton drill shorts with a sharp hip pocket and black strips on the side are $3.50.

Oh, there are socks and socks, but these wool and nylon reinforced anklets at 85 cents are the most, to say the least!

"Davis Cup" model shoes are in the stores now and star players will tell you that well-supported shoes are a "must." Women's sizes come at $6.50 and men's, $7.50.

So, with all Victoria's champs and badminton enthusiasts, Penny Saver (how did I get in with all that brass?) wishes all new players who are joining clubs, fun and recreation for the season.

Want to know where I shopped? Phone me at 2-3131.

"Arise! 'Tis time to greet a perfectly gorgeous new day with a great big gripe about something."

LOUISE DAVIS

On Etiquette

It isn't "Sissy" to Say "Thank You!" When a man has been in the hospital and received flowers and gifts, should he write thank you notes like women do? I have never known of a man who has, and have been told that it is incorrect.

Louise Davis Answers: Is it ever incorrect for anyone to say thank you? Has a woman the right and privilege to say thank you more than a man? Does a man think it too effeminate for him to say thank you or to write a thank-you note? The answer is a great big NO. If a man, woman or child is grateful for a Louise Davis kind deed or thought, why in the world shouldn't they show their appreciation? If a man, recuperating from an illness, is well enough to hold a pen, he can write thank-you notes, even briefly, to those who thought enough of him and his well-being to go out of their way to send him flowers, gifts or get-well messages. He should not expect his wife, mother, sister or secretary to take this duty off his hands unless he is incapacitated. Men are too

Minister's Wife Stays In the West

OTTAWA (CP) — For the school year, at least, Mrs. Arlin Hamilton plans to stick to the west.

The attractive wife of Northern Affairs Minister Hamilton told a reporter that she was just hunting an apartment here for her husband. She quickly found one for the new cabinet minister, who was first elected to Parliament as Progressive Conservative member for Quebec, Appelle, Sask., in the Dominion election last June.

But the Hamilton home will still be in Saskatoon, where 17-year-old Bob is completing his final high school year. They have a second son, Bill, 14.

Although born on a farm near Ottawa, Mrs. Hamilton grew up on a wheat farm near Kinley, Sask. She met Mr. Hamilton when in high school.

Sewing is one of her greatest enjoyments, and she makes most of her own dresses.

"I even want to make more clothes than I really need," she said. Good dress material is one of her weaknesses. "I can't seem to get out of a store without buying some."

TV Classes For College Housewives

NEW YORK (CP) — Early rising housewives now can take a university course in literature without leaving their own homes.

New York University's televised credit course, "sunrise semester," starts at 6.30 a.m. It operates five days a week until Jan. 10, when accredited students may take an exam at the university and submit a term paper for three credit points.

The course, in comparative literature, is the first to be given over a commercial station in the New York area. Non-registered viewers also can tune in.

Registration is still open so university officials do not know how many students will enroll but city and suburban book stores report a run on the first book in the course, The Red and the Black, by 19th-century French author Stendhal.

Dr. Floyd Zulli Jr. gave the first half-hour lectures in a book-lined setting.

Wedding Guests

Mr. and Mrs. D. Morrison and Kay and Mrs. E. Fish all came from Saskatchewan to attend the recent wedding of Mr. Donald William Fish and Miss Daphne Elizabeth Blake. Also here for the ceremony was Mr. Wally Taylor and Miss Ann Pickford of Kamloops.

NANAIMO — The Canadian Women's Press Club now has 15 branches across the country with a membership of 600. Miss Madeleine Levason, national president, told the Vancouver Island branch here Sunday.

Members from Victoria, Vancouver, New Westminster and from various other island points were present.

Miss Levason said the national organization gives unlimited opportunity for member contacts with others in the profession.

Also on the afternoon agenda was a talk by Victoria Daily Times fashion editor, Mrs. Nona Damaske, who told of an eventful week in New York, attending fall fashion showings.

A panel discussion on "What Editors Expect From Women Writers" was chaired by president Mrs. Dorothy Plant. Speakers were Harry Moffat, city editor, Nanaimo Free Press, and William Dobson, editor, Cowichan Leader.

Following afternoon tea, importer-exporter Marshall Johnson spoke and showed colorful films of life today in Red China.

A reception in the hotel board room was followed by dinner hosted by McMillan & Bloedel Ltd.

After dinner, Hon. Earle C. Westwood, minister of recreation and conservation, addressed the club, outlining his portfolio.

Larry Harris of McMillan & Bloedel, spoke on "Harmac in the Community," Harmac being the world's largest mill producing paper pulp.

Canon Pike Hears Wedding Vows

Chrysanthemums and carnations were on the altar at St. Luke's Anglican Church and baskets of gladioli and stocks formed a setting when Daphne Elizabeth Blake and Donald William Fish exchanged marriage vows recently.

Canon F. Pike conducted the ceremony. The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. C. Blake, Cedar Hill Road, and her groom a son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Fish of Royal Oak.

Traditional wedding music was played by Eric V. Edwards and "O Perfect Love" was sung by Miss Amy Walton during signing of the register.

Lustrous white satin and nylon tulle were used in the bridal gown which was styled with a three-tier skirt, an Empire bodice with dropped waistline and puffed-nylon sleeves bound with the satin. A fingertip veil was held with a seed pearl and rhinestone crown and the bouquet was of red roses and feathered carnations.

Mrs. D. Cox, Miss Carol Blake and Miss Rita Antikainen, bridal attendants, wore identical gowns of lace over taffeta in green, yellow and pink, respectively. They wore matching nylon mitts and headpieces of flowers and carried bouquets of carnations en tone with their gowns.

Flower girl Miss Beverly Blake wore a frilled blue nylon dress with white mitts and blue flower headpiece. She carried carnations to match her dress.

Wally Taylor was best man and Larry Blake and Dennis Beaveridge ushered guests to pews marked with satin bows.

A reception was held in the church hall where Frederick Staverman proposed the toast. Baskets of gladioli and stocks and vases of asters and snapdragons decorated the hall. A three-tier wedding cake was cut.

The young couple motored to Glacier National Park, Calgary, Banff and Lake Louise on honeymoon. The bride's going-away ensemble was a beige gabardine suit with matching hat and gloves, pale green accessories and a chocolate brown gabardine top coat.

Tea was served. Conveners were Mrs. G. Sullivan and Mrs. D. R. Kerley of the Royal Bride Chapter.

Critics Pan Rising Slits

SINGAPORE (AP) — Singapore's civic and fashion leaders are crying "halt" to the steadily rising slits in those tight-fitting dresses worn by Chinese girls.

From four inches above the knee a few years back, the slits have risen to as much as 12 inches.

"The cheongsam as the sheath-like dresses are called is too sexy and indecent," says Mrs. Shirin Fozdar, secretary of the Singapore Council for Women.

Mrs. Joan Botty, principal of Singapore Mannequin School, says:

"If the girls keep on extending the slits, the men will have nothing to look for. It's better to keep them guessing."

And Mrs. Rosalie Hernon, social secretary of the China Society and herself a cheongsam wearer, declares:

"We need slits to walk properly. But foreigners sometimes interpret their purpose wrongly. To the Chinese, these slits are

WHY GROW OLD?

Enjoy Fall and Benefit By Taking Daily Walk

There is something about fall it is impossible to describe. You simply have to feel it! That reminds me of an experience I had soon after moving to Tampico, Mexico as a bride.

I did not speak Spanish when I arrived there and immediately and earnestly went to work to learn that delightful language. My teacher was very stern, so much so, that I did not go to class unless I had studied at least a couple of hours. Once in bewilderment I asked, "Aren't there any rules for the subjunctive mood?" "Oh, no, my dear," she replied, "You just have to FEEL it."

Well, it is much easier for me to feel fall than it is to feel the subjunctive mood. I can tell you. Who can miss it; the brilliant coloring, the zippy, frosty, wine-like fall air, the hint of winter and promise of spring all rolled into one, the nostalgic and at-the-same-time stimulating and poetic something you DO have to feel.

This is the loveliest time of year to be outdoors. It is also the easiest time to build health. In the spring sunshine we want to loiter while the zesty weather this time of year makes one want to walk and walk. If you haven't had the habit of the daily walk, this is the time to begin it. You may feel too tired, but try it and discover how refreshed you are when you return home.

If you haven't had the habit of the daily walk, this is the time to begin it.

Here are some of the benefits of walking listed by the famous hiker Doctor Paul Dudley White, the heart specialist who took care of President Eisenhower. He said that walking maintains an improved circulation, improves the tone of the diaphragm, and benefits digestion. Finally he said, "Certainly it is true in my own case that nervous stress and strain can be counteracted and even prevented."

All you need is a good pair of walking shoes and determination. Be sure that your shoes are leather, soles as well as uppers. Heels should be well based and not higher than two inches.

Most persons require company in order to enjoy a walk. You might like to join a Hiking Club. If not then organize your own, with one or two friends. Why not enjoy this charming season outdoors?

Cook carrots this exciting new way in a wine. Coarsely shred carrots to make 3 cups. Put in saucepan with 1/4 cup sherry wine and 1/4 cup water. Cover and simmer until tender, about 5 minutes. Season with salt, pepper and butter.

TODAY'S RECIPE

APPLE CARAMEL PUDDING

One cup sifted all-purpose flour, 1/2 cup sugar, 2 teaspoons baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/2 cup milk, 2 cups chopped peeled apple, 2 cups water, 1 cup brown sugar, dash salt, 1 tablespoon butter, 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg or cinnamon.

Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Stir in milk. Work in apples. Mixture will be very stiff. Spread evenly in greased 8-inch pan. Combine remaining ingredients, bring to boil. Pour sauce into pan over batter. Bake in hot oven 400 F. about 40 to 45 minutes, or until topping is golden brown. Serve warm, with or without cream or whipped cream.

EELS? A DELECTABLE DISH?

OTTAWA (CP)—Perhaps Canadians, who don't eat many eels, are missing a delectable dish.

It's not because Canada doesn't have any eels. The Federal Fisheries Department reports Quebec has an average eel catch of 700,000 pounds. About 90 per cent of Canada's catch comes from the St. Lawrence River and its tributaries in Quebec; the remainder from Ontario and the Maritimes.

But only a small quantity of the eel catch is sold in Canada. The United States and Germany are the principal markets.

New York and other large eastern cities annually buy more than 100,000 pounds of live eels shipped in huge tanks of fresh water. They're popular with Americans of European origin. Frozen Canadian eels go to Germany.

Shapeless, Up-Down Dresses Hit In London; Women 'Fascinated'

LONDON (Reuters) — The "sack" dress is a London fashion hit. Within a week of the arrival here of the first models from Paris, wholesale houses were reporting buyers hurrying to order these shapeless, up-and-down dresses. Women are still gazing at them in store windows with horrified fascination. Their first reaction is usually something like "I would not be seen dead in that."

THEY GIVE IN

But after due reflection, many say to themselves: "Oh well, after all, it has got something... and it is different." Which means that soon most of them have succumbed, and added one or more "sacks" to their wardrobes.

Sacks for every occasion are a feature of the mid-season collection of Roeliff & Chapman, a typical wholesale house which makes clothes designed for the fashion-conscious housewives of suburbia. This firm reports that orders for "sacks" are streaming in from store buyers in all parts of the country.

RUSSIAN WOMEN DO MUCH ROUGH MANUAL LABOR

REGINA (CP) — Wilma Townsend says that in Russia women seem to bear the brunt of rough, manual labor and elderly women are employed at the most menial tasks. "Simply everyone works," said 20-year-old Wilma. "There were nurseries for little ones who were only visited by their parents at the weekend."

Miss Townsend was one of 30,000 young people from many parts of the world who visited Moscow for two weeks this summer. She said the experience was worth the $500 spent on the trip.

Flattery Found in Light Bulbs

NEW YORK (CP) — Colored lights bring drama and interest to the home but don't use them in the dining area, advises Edythe Kendall, dynamic young president of a light bulb firm. She explains that a pink bulb will flatter the hostess but the food will look horrible.

Pink is the most popular color in bulbs, next to white. Light green bulbs also sell well. Miss Kendall suggests putting them behind green plants.

The lighting specialist advises against more than one color to a room. She also says colored lighting should be indirect, never from an overhead fixture.

She believes lights placed behind a sofa or chair do flatter things for a woman's profile.

Boat Found, No Trace Of Two Men

VANCOUVER (CP) — Discovery of a small capsized boat off Galiano Island Sunday quashed hopes that two Vancouver fishermen missing in the Strait of Georgia may be alive.

RCMP identified it as the same boat the men took fishing Thursday from a beach near Boundary Bay.

Missing are Peter Van Kleek,
27, and D. H. Cherry, 35.
A search organized by off-duty Ladner policemen was called off when news of the boat's discovery became known.
The boat's motor was missing.

Five RCAF search aircraft flew over the area Saturday without finding a trace of the men.

The boat was discovered floating upside down at Whaler Bay, Galiano Island.

Sidney Police Warn Of Rug Peddlers

SIDNEY — Island residents have been warned by Sidney RCMP to be on the lookout for rug peddlers who are offering $25 rugs purchased in Vancouver for up to $400 each as "high grade eastern" imports.

Three people were caught and warned off here before sales were made.

Although they have left the district they may try to pull the same trick elsewhere, police said.

Dial Phones to Ring At Qualicum Tuesday

Two young men, working quickly and quietly in a small building at Qualicum, have molded a new phase in the community's history.

Their busy fingers spell the coming of automatic dial telephone service.

On Tuesday, Oct. 1, at 7 a.m., B.C. Telephone Co.'s newest automatic system, to be known as the Bowser exchange, makes its debut, providing telephone service to about 130 residence and business subscribers.

L. A. Huxtable, district commercial manager at Nanaimo, said the telephone system cost more than $100,000 to install.
He also announced that a similar system will be introduced in mid-October to the Oyster Bay-Black Creek area.

The two men installing the intricate maze of electronic equipment in the telephone building on Island Highway

RCMP said Sunday a hunter,
Matti Loukivouri, of Campbell River, found a large piece of crumpled aluminum at the 2,500-foot level of the mountain. They said they checked the hunter's report and found another piece of metal.

Two men were aboard the jet when it disappeared. Police received reports at the time from people who said they had heard an explosion.

Knife-Slaying Hearing Ends In Acquittal

NANAIMO — Vernon Ernest
Breckon, 34, was acquitted in Assize Court here of the knife-slaying March 31 of a Mudge
Island Indian at Quathisqui Cove following a St. Patrick's night dance in the community hall.

The jury deliberated nearly two hours following a two-hour charge by Mr. Justice J. G.
Ruttan.

In his address to the jury,
Mr. Justice Ruttan said there "is not much doubt" the victim, William Wallace, met death as a result of stab wounds inflicted by the accused.

"But the jury should give weight to the possibility that the stabbing may have been an accident," he said.

The trial lasted five days.
Breckon had admitted stabbing Wallace with a butcher knife, but said the dead man had attacked him first. He said he brandished the knife to "scare" his assailant.

COVERED 21½ MILES

NANAIMO (CP) — Janice
White, 21-year-old swimmer from Toronto, failed by only 6½ nautical miles Sunday in her attempt to swim from here to Vancouver.

High winds and a changing tide forced her from the waters of Georgia Strait after covering 21½ nautical miles in 15 hours and 10 minutes.

She was two miles off Bowen Island and only 6½ nautical miles from Point Atkinson, at the entrance to Vancouver's Burrard Inlet, when her coach, manager, Gordon Phare, ordered her out of the water.

Miss White, who placed sixth in the mass swim across the Strait of Juan de Fuca in August, said afterwards she was not tired when she was forced to quit.

Janice started swimming at the age of two. She would have been the first to conquer the rolling strait had she succeeded.

The swim was sponsored by the Nanaimo and District Chamber of Commerce.

Early Retirement Plan Urged by IWA's Morris

DUNCAN (CP) — Joe Morris, president of the IWA in B.C., told a meeting of Local 180 here Sunday it should not be the aim of union policy to
"chain a worker to the chair-ot until he's 65, 60, or even 50."

"The aim should be to bring about conditions which would guarantee a satisfactory level of security to workers so they could retire at as early an age as possible," he said.

The quarterly meeting of the union was discussing the policy of some operations to enforce the retirement of workers at 65.
A form-letter canvass of operations in the local jurisdiction showed a diversity of policy on the part of companies.

Some companies do enforce retirement at 65, either compulsory or "by mutual consent" opposed to compulsory retirement against an employee's desire, and insists that we invoke the provisions of the master agreement for all employees regardless of age.

The provision of the master agreement referred to was said to be the priority clause, which guarantees a worker's position so long as he is qualified to hold it.

There was considerable discussion on a proposed merger of Local 180 with a membership ranging between 4,500 and 5,500 and Local 1363 at Courtenay, with a minimum membership of 1,600.

The merger was sought by Courtenay because of the difficulty of giving sufficient time to the organizational demands of that union.

President George Smith said that further discussions would be held with Courtenay local on the question and that the local membership would be kept informed of progress through special bulletins if that was necessary.

SHE MISSED THE BUSS AND RAILWAY MUST PAY

NORWALK, Ohio (AP)—A jury has awarded $16,666 to a man whose wife complained a railway accident impaired his kissing ability.

Ellis Dotson, 44, sued the Baltimore and Ohio for $25,000 for injuries he suffered Dec. 1, 1955, when he was hit by a freight car while employed as a brakeman.

His wife, Mildred, testified the injury impaired his ability to work on their farm and caused an impediment in his speech.

"But that's not so bad," she said. "He can't kiss the way he used to."

Two Unions Fighting For Staff of Store

A battle for the allegiance of 60 office workers, sales clerks, and warehouse employees is shaping up against between two Victoria unions.

General Teamsters' Union, Local 885, was decertified recently by the provincial labor department as bargaining agent for the employees of McLennan, McFeely & Prior Ltd.

The move was made on the application of a majority of the members. It followed a summer-long conflict between the Teamsters' Union and Local 333, Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Union, which made an abortive attempt to replace the teamsters.

RENEWS EFFORT

The department store union's application for certification was withdrawn after the teamsters protested raiding tactics to the Canadian Labor Congress. But it has reapplied since the teamsters' decertification.

"If they are successful, in raiding 'Mac & Mac', then the Hungarians Exploited By Landlord

VANCOUVER (CP)—The immigration department has stopped payment to a Vancouver landlord who was receiving more than $500 a month rent from Hungarian refugees. Immigration Superintendent P. W. Bird said Saturday.

Inspectors found 17 refugees living in cramped conditions in a dingy seven-room house. There was only one bathroom and toilet for the 17 tenants, including four children.

The job-seeking Hungarians are supported by the government which was giving the landlord $65 a month for each adult tenant and $32.50 for each child. No meals were provided by the landlord. He gave about $30 to each adult and $15 to each child a month for food. Tenants said he threatened them with prison or deportation if they complained about the accommodation.

The refugees were taken from the house Friday and will live at the immigration building until suitable accommodation is found, said Mr. Bird.

Lake Water Polluted; Users Warned

A slight increase in pollution of Prospect Lake has brought a warning to lakeside residents to boil the water before use.

A. J. Shakespeare, president of Prospect Lake and District Community Association, said that the pollution will force installation of water mains for domestic use as has been done at Glen and Florence Lakes.

He made the statements after receiving a report on the lake from the Saanich and South Vancouver Island Health Unit which showed the bacterial count in the lake increased slightly during the past year.

Installation of public conveniences and a hiring of a caretaker were recommended in the health unit report.

Minimum wage laws, other labor problems and the employment of juveniles to prevent delinquency will be among topics discussed during the three-day meet.

Alcan, Steelmen Settle Dispute

(From CP Dispatches)

VANCOUVER — United Steelworkers of America and the Aluminum Company of Canada have agreed on terms of a collective agreement to end their Kitimat dispute over wages and working conditions, Vancouver lawyer Reg Moir said Sunday.

Mr. Moir, chairman of a conciliation board appointed to consider the dispute, said Wally Ross, union representative, and Robert Wilson, company representative, informed him of the agreement.

The terms will be submitted to a meeting of the union membership at Kitimat later this week, when the union negotiating committee will recommend their acceptance, he said.

Details of the agreement were not disclosed. The union was seeking a 30-cent-an-hour increase for 2,000 workers at Kitimat and nearby Kemano. The company offered a 45-cent increase over three years.

POOL ROOMS CHECKED

VANCOUVER — City pool rooms were checked Sunday to determine whether any operators were violating the Lord's Day Act. Police said they found two East End pool halls open and warned the proprietors. BOY ARSON SUSPECT

VANCOUVER — A 14-year-old boy has been charged with attempted arson and attempting to extort $15,000 from a landlord by threatening to burn down an apartment block.

They said he slipped a threatening note under the door of landlord Michael Polischuk after setting a small fire in a second-floor corridor of the block as warning.

SAMPLES OF VICTORIANA, including famed hanging flower baskets and caricatures of our tweedy "characters" were in evidence at Chamber convention today. Hoffa Foe Quits To Aid Others

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — California Congressman John F. Shelley today withdrew as a candidate for the teamsters' president to aid what he said he hopes will become a combined opposition against James R. Hoffa.

Shelley's withdrawal, coming after teamster convention sessions began, left three others in the race against Hoffa, accused by the Senate committee of misusing union funds and powers.

Hoffa is the leading candidate, however, to succeed retiring president Dave Beck, himself enmeshed in corruption charges levelled by the Senate committee and parent AFL-CIO labor organization.

Beck won a standing ovation from the nearly 2,000 convention delegates after an emotion-packed defence against corruption charges pending against him, Hoffa and other teamsters' leaders.

Hoffa seemed well in command of the convention and was cheered along with Beck.

Beck, in a keynote address, said he and other teamster leaders, including Hoffa, have been unfairly dealt with by the Senate racketeers.

He said they were condemned on unproved charges before court trial.

SALES TAX, RUM BLOCK YUKON-B.C. MERGER

There are two good reasons why the Yukon Territory does not want to join British Columbia. "We don't want your 5 per cent sales tax and we won't give up our 30 per cent overproof rum," said Rolf Hougen, 28-year-old Whitehorse delegate to the Canadian Chamber of Commerce convention in Victoria.

Mr. Hougen is president of the Whitehorse Board of Trade which has consistently voted against union with B.C.

(See Also Page 3)

MONTREAL, Que. (CP) — Authoritative sources said today Canada got strong support from virtually all segments of the Commonwealth as she outlined her proposals for holding a full-scale Commonwealth trade and economic conference.

Finance Minister Fleming was reported to have opened his appeal for such a meeting with an 80-minute speech delivered before the finance ministers of the 11-country partnership.

Informants said he spoke in general terms without going into the details of his proposal. But the tenor of the reaction was there would be no opposition to getting ahead with plans for the full conference, the first of its kind in a quarter century.

"CASTROPHE"

Britain's chancellor of the exchequer, Peter Thorneycroft, has already publicly announced support.

Spokesmen for such other countries as South Africa, India, Pakistan, Ghana and New Zealand have also indicated support for the move.

Meanwhile a suggestion to establish a British-Canadian free trade area, made Saturday by Peter Thorneycroft, British chancellor of the exchequer, drew immediate unfavorable reaction from Canadian manufacturers.

"Catastrophe," said Owen Greening, vice-president of the Greening Wire Co.

"With British wire drawers earning a wage of 90 cents an hour compared with $2.20 to $2.40 in Canada," Mr. Greening said, "we just can't possibly compete on an equal basis."

D. C. Gaskin, president of Studebaker-Packard of Canada, Limited, said: "So far as the automobile industry is concerned, we have already given our all in this business of tariff concessions to Britain—there is nothing left to give."

Several British newspapers commenting on a British proposal to set up an Anglo-Canadian free trade area, saw in it political difficulties for Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

The Financial Times says: "Canadian secondary industries are a good deal less prosperous than they would like to be. Several of them, at this moment, are pressing hard for increased tariff protection against U.K. imports."

"Pressure of this kind is more likely to grow than diminish and raises extremely serious problems for a party of Mr. Diefenbaker's political color, with a general election to face in the near future."

The Court of Appeals had revoked a temporary injunction granted by U.S. District Judge F. Dickinson Letts against the scheduled election.

Polar Flight Lands

LONDON (UP) — The first jet plane to fly non-stop over North Pole from Los Angeles to London landed here today.

The flying time for the 5,508 miles was 18 hours and 32 minutes.

'THEY CALL HIM CHARLES'

Prince Escapes Germ As Flu Hits School

LONDON (UP) — Asian flu has hit Prince Charles' new school but the heir to the British throne is not among those affected.

Five of the 93 boys at Cheam School in Berkshire, 50 miles from London, have Asian flu, matron Stella Jacks reported. They are isolated in a special room and were reported progressing satisfactorily.

Charles went to the school, of which his father is a former pupil, last week. The London Daily Express quoted an unidentified member of the staff today as saying he seems to be "settling in well."

"He seems to be very popular with the other boys," the staff member said. "They call him Charles."

Our Father, keep alive in us a compassion for those suffering in the distressed areas of the world. Deliver us from fear and frustration and by a victorious faith let us reach in helpfulness to all who need assistance; in the name of Christ. Amen.

LEADING FIGURES IN BIG CONVENTION

700 Mark Opening Of Chamber Parley

WIRE BRIEFS

'Highly Regarded'

Miners Back on Job

GLACE BAY, N.S. (CP) — United Mine Workers headquarters here said today that "as far as we know" 6,000 Cape Breton coal miners returned to their jobs today following a five-day wildcat strike.

Boy Dies After Ordeal

CALGARY (CP) — Eleven-year-old Robert Johnson died in hospital Sunday night less than seven hours after he and a companion were buried alive in a tunnel they had dug in a pit near their northwest Calgary homes. Barry McDonald, nine, was revived by artificial respiration.

Nearly 700 businessmen from across the country assembled in Victoria today for the official opening of the 28th annual meeting of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce.

It is the largest business convention ever held in the city. The brief opening ceremonies were held in the main ball room of the Empress Hotel at 9 a.m.

By 9:30 the work of the four-day conference was under way. A 50-man national policy committee, which is to meet all day and this evening in closed session, began hammering out form the many varied resolutions which will be presented to the membership Wednesday.

In an interview on his arrival Sunday, Raymond Dupuis of Montreal, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, said Canada needs a period of adjustment to balance her economy following the post-war boom.

"Our progress as a nation is indicated by the fact that more than $48,000,000,000 have been invested in capital goods in Canada since 1945," Mr. Dupuis said.

"It is time we paused to take stock of the situation and adjust ourselves to these new conditions."

Delegates were welcomed this morning by Hugh Stephen, new president of the Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

The Victoria group has looked forward to the meeting "with eager anticipation for the past 12 months," Mr. Stephen said.

Mr. Dupuis, who called the first session to order, in turn praised the Victoria Chamber for its efforts in making the convention a success.

Unparalleled Expansion Foreseen

"There is ample evidence of the hard work and enterprise you have put forth," Mr. Dupuis said.

Mr. Stephen told the delegates they had come to the capital city of a province "which, we who live here believe stands upon the threshold of an era of unparalleled expansion and development."

Responsibilities of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce are great, the Victoria president said.

"... by the skill and imagination with which the business community utilizes today's opportunities to forestall tomorrow's perils will our Free World either live or perish," he said.

"Therefore, as business men and women, let us address us to our tasks during these next

Liberals Plan Early Meeting To Pick Chief

OTTAWA (CP) — The executive of the National Liberal Federation said today it has decided that a national leadership convention should be held at earliest possible date to pick a successor to Rt. Hon. Louis St. Laurent.

Mr. St. Laurent made it clear on arrival in Ottawa by train Sunday night that he intends to lead the Opposition through the autumn session of Parliament, starting Oct. 14.

Mr. St. Laurent is not a member of the executive council, and did not attend the meeting which is expected to sit all day and perhaps Tuesday.

VICTORIAN DETAINED BY SYRIANS

JERUSALEM (AP) — Two UN officers and an Israeli liaison officer were kidnapped by Syrians today but released and returned to Israel soon afterward, an Israeli spokesman said tonight. One of the UN officers was identified as a Canadian, Frederick G. Woodrow of Victoria, B.C.

The mayor added, "I am going to recommend to council that we apply for a private charter. I am convinced our problems, in many cases are quite different from the problems of the small municipalities."

He said if a charter is granted, it permits the city to deal with circumstances peculiar to its own area.

Vancouver has its charter amended yearly to adopt it to changing circumstances. This is done through a private bills committee without recourse to other B.C. municipalities.

NO DEMAND

The question only affects about eight municipalities in the entire province. I don't know what the views of the others are. But I do know the people of Victoria voted overwhelmingly for an elected police commission.

"That power has been taken away without consulting either the council or the people. Yet the system (of electing commissioners) has been effective for 25 years here. There was no demand for any change."

The mayor said Victoria wanted endorsement of its resolution for amendment to the act which would maintain the elective system.

"The resolution was turned down by municipalities which had no interest in it. There were other examples but that was the most important one."

Would Cut Municipal Union Ties

Mayor Percy Scurrah of Victoria today proposed the city should apply at the next session of the legislature for its own private charter.

He said this would mean a loosening of present ties with the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

He said he will ask council to take action on the matter at its October 10 meeting.

The mayor's statement followed a UBCM convention last week in Nelson.

A number of resolutions for Municipal Act changes which would have been beneficial to the city were turned down by the conference.

SOONER THE BETTER

"I came away convinced the sooner we apply for a private charter, the better off we'll be," said Mayor Scurrah. "The convention had been growing in my mind."

The mayor is a member of the UBCM executive.

He said he was decided on the course after "... going to the UBCM and having all small municipalities vote on our resolutions which didn't affect them."

City manager C. C. Wyatt pointed out Vancouver is the only B.C. city with its own charter. It permits the city to deal with circumstances peculiar to its own area.

'WALK OR TAKE BUS' FOR ROAD CHECKS

Gaglardi's Driving Licence Ordered Suspended One Month

The driving licence of Highway Minister Philip Gaglardi has been suspended for one month by the motor vehicle branch, as the result of his two convictions for speeding this year.

This came to light today after Mr. Gaglardi had already made a statement that whatever the MVB decided he intended to surrender his licence "for at least a month" so that there could not be any "accusations of favoritism."

Mr. Gaglardi was fined $10 for speeding on Trans-Canada Highway near Kamloops in August. In March he was fined for travelling too fast over Granville Street bridge in Vancouver.

Just back home in Kamloops from a good roads convention in Saskatoon, Mr. Gaglardi was told Sunday the MVB was processing his driving record.

He then said he intended to forfeit his licence temporarily.

"Though I was only doing 60 miles an hour—definitely not 85 as reported—I have broken the law and I'm ready to be punished," he said.

"I would also like to point out that in 30 years of driving I've never had a serious accident or appeared before a magistrate." In the Kamloops case the fine was paid through an agent.

Today the MVB disclosed that a routine suspension of Mr. Gaglardi's licence for one month had been decided upon last Thursday. Notice of cancellation went out to Kamloops by registered mail. Mr. Gaglardi has been in transit from the Saskatoon convention.

In his statement Sunday he was asked how he would make his regular checks of highways without a driver's licence.

He said: "I'll walk or take a bus. I certainly won't hire a chauffeur. Whatever inconveniences I suffer certainly won't cost the taxpayers a nickel."

As m' Uncle Zeke said when he walked out o' court with a mere $10 fine fer speedin': Somebody up there likes me.

But th' horses'll hev quite a laugh t' hear th' court sayin' "whoa" t' th' teamsters.

Gittin' so many businessmen to a convention has developed into quite a business.

pression by making a special greeting in fluent French to the Quebec delegates.

The chamber is a bilingual organization, and Mr. Dupuis disclosed that an amendment will be put forward at the convention to include the French title of the organization in its corporate title.

At the same time, the president said the special simultaneous French-English translation service usually provided would not be employed at this convention.

This was because of the distance involved in transporting the special equipment and difficulty in obtaining translators, Mr. Dupuis said.

Invocation at the opening session was made by Archbishop H. E. Sexton.

Greetings from the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Canada were extended by president Douglas A. Fisher of Aurora, Ont.

MANY HERE SUNDAY

Delegates and wives arrived in the city during the weekend, the largest group on Sunday.

They were entertained at a buffet supper in the Crystal Garden by the City of Victoria at 6 p.m. and watched an Aquacade put on by the Victoria Chamber.

The national board of directors went into session at 9 p.m. and appointed committee chairmen.

Program Tuesday includes the annual meeting at 9 a.m. and election of officers.

At 10 a panel of speakers will launch discussion on the convention theme — "Productivity—Key to Prosperity."

Mr. Dupuis said the theme can be interpreted as "expressing the belief that material wealth and freedom depend upon the amount each worker produces during a given length of time."

"To keep pace with the tremendous pressure of increasing populations, growing demands for natural resources and rising standards of living—the working forces of the world must move faster and faster even to stay where they are."

"Those nations making the fastest strides in productivity will enjoy the greatest measures of prosperity."

"From this can be seen that the goal of increased productivity can be attained only by teamwork—team work on the part of management, labor, government and the consumer."

TO SET POLICY

A total of 13 proposed policy declarations were due to be discussed at the closed session today.

The declarations were chosen from almost 30 proposals to be discussed in detail by the committee because they were "of a contentious nature."

The list includes declarations on: Communism, profits, marketing, National Film Board, employer-employee relations, automation, employment of older workers, seasonal unemployment, immigration and citizenship, national health and health services, natural resources, Canada-United States relations and international trade relations.

The proposals, after discussion by the policy committee, will be presented to a plenary session of the meeting, open to discussion by all delegates.

The policy will then be presented to the federal government, probably in November. The policy will be the basis for all Chamber statements throughout the 1957-58 year.

FIRST DISCUSSION

The declarations on automation and on employment of older workers are both new parts of the chamber policy, under discussion here for the first time. Both were submitted by the executive council.

Dark and eloquent, Mr. Dupuis is president of the family firm of Dupuis Freres, which operates one of the largest department store and mail order houses in Montreal.

Formerly a practicing lawyer, he joined the board of directors in 1935.

"I am confident of the buoyancy of the Canadian economy," Mr. Dupuis said. "We may have some ups and downs but the general trade picture is bright, and by 1960 we should have adjusted ourselves to the new conditions."

"I am not too concerned over the credit situation, because Canadians generally are thrifty and level-headed and do not take on commitments beyond their means."

SAVINGS HIGHER

"This is evident from the fact that collections of consumer credit accounts are generally satisfactory while personal savings in the chartered banks have passed the $6 billion mark."

"Canadian consumers have more purchasing power than ever before, they are considerably more numerous and they have more take-home pay."

"The domestic market is becoming an important factor in our Canadian economy. It is true we must rely to a large extent on external trade. But we are also in a good position to absorb a good proportion of our home production."

STABBING VICTIM DIES IN VANCOUVER HOSPITAL

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 50-year-old east-end rooming house operator died in Vancouver General Hospital today of stab wounds.

William Ostashek was found stabbed in the left side of his abdomen Sunday. Police were called to the rooming house by John Kowbel, who said Ostashek told him someone had tried to kill him.

Police said they found a kitchen knife believed to be the weapon used on Ostashek. It was found wrapped in a towel.

A 47-year-old man was being questioned by police Sunday night.

"It will reduce our participation in the UBCM about 80 per cent."

"We can get along without the support of the smaller municipalities. We could hook up (for purposes of seeking special legislation) with Vancouver, and our demands would represent the people of about half the provincial population."

Mr. Wyatt agreed with the mayor, if Victoria is granted a private charter it could make the question of amalgamation in this area "more attractive," depending on what power is given.

Mr. Wyatt said Victoria drew up a draft charter some years ago while Arthur Patton was city solicitor. It contained several changes which have since been incorporated in the new Municipal Act.

The draft charter was shelved until the new act was made public.

Mr. Wyatt thought it "is quite possible" the government would permit Victoria, in a private charter, to elect its own police commission.

RAMSAY DOUBTFUL

If the city were granted the right to make other decisions now withheld from municipalities covered by the Act, surrounding municipalities might wish to enter Victoria.

Ald. Hugh Ramsay, who saw the UBCM toss out his pet resolution (which asked the government to stabilize the methods of applying business tax and trade licence levies), was doubtful, however, that Victoria should split too far from the UBCM.

"It may take two or three years for us to obtain a private charter. We wouldn't want to antagonize the UBCM." But, he added, he would support the request for a charter.

Ald. J. Donald Smith last week, without recourse to council, said he would take the matter to the legislature personally. He is an MLA for the city.

Faubus Undecided On Calling House

From AP and UP Dispatches

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—Governor Orval Faubus today said "at the moment, it appears very likely there will be a special session of the legislature" to take up the Little Rock integration crisis.

Such a session would be asked to deal with the Little Rock school integration controversy in which Faubus is arrayed against the federal government.

Faubus added with emphasis, however, that the special session "still isn't definite."

MAY CLOSE SCHOOL

There have been suggestions that the legislature be asked to close Little Rock Central High School where federal troops are enforcing court ordered integration of nine Negro students—and have the school reopened as a private institution.

Faubus said he thinks the legislature is "predominantly in favor of an extra session."

In Washington, some government officials expressed doubt today that Gov. Faubus or the Arkansas legislature can legally disintegrate Central High School in Little Rock.

"That would be an act to evade the constitutional rights of the colored children," said one government legal source here in close touch with the Little Rock situation.

"The courts would not permit it. They (the state) would have to close down all the schools in Little Rock, not just the one racially-mixed school in the city."

Meanwhile, the second week of integrated education at Central High School began peacefully today. A reduced force of paratroopers, with bayonets removed from their rifles, stood guard as nine Negro children entered the school without incident.

FIFTH SCHOOL CLOSED

TRAIL—School and medical authorities here Saturday ordered a fifth Trail school closed because of an influenza epidemic.

James A. Stewart, co-ordinator of teaching and counselling for School District 11, said the Rossland Junior-Senior High joined four others shut because of the epidemic.

The total school population of the five schools is 2,500.

SKUNK YIELDS TO GAS

EDMONTON (CP) — The gas company outgassed a skunk here Sunday.

The animal became firmly entrenched beneath the floor of a south-side home and wouldn't move. The house was evacuated, a hole drilled in the floor and ammonia hydroxide poured in.

The gas from the chemical killed the skunk.

Tariff-Scrapping Plan Offered Canada by U.K.

MONT TREMBLANT, Que. (CP) — In perhaps the most far-reaching suggestion of its kind, Britain has proposed a gradual scrapping of all Anglo-Canadian tariffs as a means of expanding trade between the two countries.

But there was mounting opposition in official Canadian quarters on the grounds such a move might wreck large segments of comparatively young Canadian industry, which probably would find it difficult to compete with lower-cost United Kingdom production.

The proposal, which hit this Commonwealth finance ministers meeting like a bombshell, was disclosed at a Saturday night press conference by Peter Thorneycroft, chancellor of the U.K. exchequer.

Finance Minister Donald Fleming, who sat by his side, emphasized that the offer had not been formally presented to the Canadian government. He could not "prejudge" the suggestion which is to be considered at bilateral talks at Ottawa Wednesday. But what he had seen of speculative reports led him to believe that it would present "very formidable difficulties" for his government.

Mr. Fleming told reporters Saturday that Canadian proposals would be secret until the conference authorized disclosure. But it is understood that Canada would have to reject the proposal as an over-all project.

Canada might accept parts of it, but it was understood from U.K. sources that Britain would not agree unless Canada accepted gradual abolition of tariffs between the two countries "right across the board."

The tariff proposal, which veteran observers here compared with Britain's wartime 1940 invitation to France to join the Commonwealth, was not discussed at the 11-country ministerial talks here. But it became the sensational news of the weekend.

Today, the meeting turns to the Canadian suggestion for holding a full-dress Commonwealth trade and economic conference to increase trade in that area.

U.K. Willing to Talk Alternatives

Mr. Thorneycroft said it would be discussed at Ottawa as the "most adventurous" way of implementing Prime Minister Diefenbaker's proposed switch of 15 per cent of Canada's imports from the United States to Britain.

He hurried to add that he realized the suggestion raised a lot of complexities for the Anglo-Canadian governments. It might be difficult for the Canadian government to implement such a project immediately. Meanwhile, alternatives might be considered, such as increased purchase in Britain by Canadian government agencies.

Britain would like to see Canada buy more of her cars, textiles, engineering products and other goods.

Britain did not want to be held to the 15 per cent figure—this would amount to some $600,000,000 a year, added to the $485,000,000 Britain currently exports to Canada. But Britain did feel there was room for increased Canadian imports from British factories.

Mr. Thorneycroft emphasized

U.S. Atom Test Warning to Russ

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP)—The United States declared today it will continue nuclear test explosions until the Soviet Union agrees to stop producing atomic and hydrogen weapons.

In a speech before the UN's 12-power disarmament commission, U.S. delegate Henry Cabot Lodge challenged the Kremlin to accept such a ban on stockpiling weapons if it really wants to end the nuclear tests.

If the Soviet Union is not prepared to agree, Lodge said: "Then I say with all the solemnity that I can that we are faced with a present major danger far graver than the problematic minor danger that comes from the testing of nuclear weapons in order to make the new power available for defence without dangerous fallout."

The Time Is Now

IN APPEALING FOR A QUARTER of a million dollars for charity this year, the Greater Victoria Community Chest is requesting a record sum from a record population in a community that is enjoying a record prosperity. There is no good reason why the objective should not be attained.

For various reasons the total is larger than the $220,000 required last year. The city itself is growing, bringing added responsibilities for the agencies that cater for the sick, the young, the old, the troubled. Two more agencies have been added to the group which makes a united appeal each year through the Community Chest. The expenses of most agencies have mounted, partly through additional calls on their services, partly through the generally rising price level that affects all businesses and households in these times.

In these respects the Greater Victoria Chest does not differ from Chests in other communities in Canada and the United States. In one respect, however, the local organization does differ from many others: its percentage costs of collection and administration are among the lowest on the continent.

It is important to remember that a contribution to the Chest is not a gift to one organization. The Chest itself has no existence apart from the 20 agencies it serves. It is merely an arrangement to collect the funds each year and apportion them out to the member agencies on the basis of need and availability.

Unless a contribution is specifically named for one or more agencies, it will be spread over the whole group. That is something to keep in mind in deciding how much to give. There are 20 agencies, there are 365 days during which they must carry on their work.

In lumping their needs into one annual appeal to the public the agencies are avoiding the necessity for 20 separate requests for generosity, and they are avoiding the extra expense that such duplication would entail.

The annual Community Chest campaign is now established as one of the major events of our community life. It is the period during which a concentrated effort is made to provide for the necessary and valuable work that is done throughout the year. This city and its surrounding areas would certainly be unpleasant to live in if that work had to be halted. It can only continue through the contributions of each one of us.

Hosts to Canada's Business

AS THEY BEGAN THEIR SERIES of sessions today, delegates to the Canadian Chamber of Commerce convention could rest assured of the warmth of Victoria's welcome to the industrial and business leaders of the nation.

The importance of discussions during the next few days here is widely recognized. The policy decisions which are reached will have widespread effects.

Victorians appreciate the significance of this annual gathering. Beyond that, as residents of the host city, they hope the visitors will enjoy themselves in a capital world-renowned for its attractiveness as a convention centre.

The Victoria Daily Times joins in the wish that the deliberations of the convention delegates will be profitable and that the social affairs and entertainment will impress lasting and pleasant memories on Canadian Chamber of Commerce members who are our guests.

Councillors and Honor

DR. CHARLOTTE WHITTON, former mayor of Ottawa, has left the delegates to the Union of British Columbia Municipalities Convention with a few points to puzzle out.

She will doubtless have found generous agreement for her argument that it is vital to establish respect and prestige for public office. Too often the worthwhile citizen who is elected finds that on attaining office he is presumed to have lost some of his abilities.

This impression is understandable to a degree. When a person enters public life, his verbal indiscretions and possible errors in judgment become public also. In private life he could make his own private mistakes. Office holders can, of course, avoid criticism on that score if they can avoid making mistakes. But they cannot preserve respect and an air of wisdom merely by saying nothing or by taking no stand on issues of the moment. The voting public accepts such silence and inactivity as definite evidence of incapacity—a ready subject for unkind ridicule.

Certainly it is time that citizens showed greater understanding of a public man's difficulties and extended to him a higher measure of respect for his conscientious efforts to serve.

A Forward Step

A RECENT ANNOUNCEMENT from the laboratory of Dr. Price at Johns Hopkins reveals that "an opening wedge" has been driven into the medical barrier posed by the common cold.

As in any such medical discovery great care was taken not to create a false impression. The cold is not defeated. But there is hope that one of apparently several cold viruses—one which was isolated four years ago—has perhaps met its match. Conservative claims are made for the new vaccine. But if this is indeed a breakthrough in a hitherto impregnable wall, then other advances may well follow in the near future.

The story of such medical victories lies rarely in spectacular announcements or discoveries. It consists rather of long and patient research, of hours of drudgery, of persistent determination, and usually of highly organized teamwork. Through such dedicated toil, the barriers will fall one by one in man's march to full control of his environment.

Russia and the Fitting Question

ONE OF THE LIGHTER SIDES of Soviet discomfort is reflected in the reported Russian dissatisfaction with the clothes they wear.

It is permissible now for Ivan to object that his suit doesn't make him look the man he'd like to look. Anna can protest that the lines of her dress do little for her.

There is a typical Slavic heaviness in the Soviet Government's decision to enlist the services of anthropologists to help provide the average citizen with better fitting clothes. But the significance of the sartorial revolt runs deeper than this.

The Kremlin now knows that the comrades aren't satisfied with their external appearance. But the Kremlin, for obvious reasons, has limited means of determining how far below the surface this discontent extends. The average Russian, for self-preservation, is not yet ready to express discontent freely over the tailoring of the mind and spirit to which he is subjected.

Perhaps there may be implications of such discontent not far beyond the borders. Mr. Gomulka and Mr. Tito have given such indications.

Is it too much to speculate that Ivan is as seriously concerned with the way Kremlin-manufactured ideas fit inside his head as he is with the way his hat sits atop it?

How About You?

LET 'EM HAVE IT

By B. A. TOBIN

It Works Both Ways

WHEN Community Chest canvassers come around each year, the answer they like best is: "Sure, I'm all ready for you. Here's my contribution."

For a lot of needy folk in our community, that's the answer that is heard most often too. But the canvassers don't always get it; occasionally a locked door, or a barking dog, or an eye peering from behind an upstairs window shade is the only reply to their knock. On the other hand they sometimes run into a refusal that is so unusual and off-beat that its sheer originality takes the disappointment out of it.

For instance, I remember a Red Feather canvasser once telling me that he knocked at a door in the downtown section and asked for a donation from the man who answered.

"Nope," said the fellow. "I've paid my road and poll tax and that's all I'm giving this year."

Dead Stop

The collector was all primed to answer a hundred different questions and meet any kind of argument, but that reply stumped him. He walked away with a glazed look in his eye, completely defeated.

(PS. Don't try it this year; there isn't any road and poll tax any more.)

But maybe the citizen wasn't so wrong after all in confusing charitable donations and city taxes. Because basically they have something in common. Just as a community cannot do its job without tax revenues, neither can it function properly without charitable revenues.

In the former case the law collects it. In the latter it's a matter of appealing to people's generosity. And significantly enough, in the long run the voluntary type of collection seems to be as successful as the enforced levy.

That says quite a lot for human nature. When a community problem is clearly presented to most folks you don't have to do any arguing. Their own generous feelings will give the right answer.

No Hardship

In comparatively few cases, actually, do charitable donations mean that the giver has to do without something himself. The gift of a few dollars gets swallowed up in the year's spending and nobody suffers too much.

That's why the widow's mite has always rated more appreciation than the ordinary contribution. Where charity means real self-denial, it takes on a touch of glory—it's the real thing.

And there are many annual givers in Greater Victoria who have that touch too. Pensioners, widows with families to support, old folks whose personal pride is still a shifting thing—you'll find them handing over their gift with the cheerful good wishes that make it worth many times its monetary value.

But the backbone of any public appeal is of course the response from that main body of citizens who aren't especially rich and aren't especially poor—just the folks you mean when you speak of "the people of Greater Victoria." They're the ones who can make or break a campaign in any city. Victoria is pretty lucky in that respect.

Double Duty

It's around this time — Community Chest time — each year that a lot of people develop split personalities. They don't suffer from it though; they enjoy it. What I have in mind is tied up in the story about the little boy at Sunday school.

"After all," the teacher told him, "we're really on this earth to help others."

"Okay," says the lad. "But what are the others here for?"

It's a fair question, and it has a fair answer. The answer is that when you give to someone else you're both a giver and receiver at the same time. The "others" benefit, of course. But you benefit too. You become one of them.

Shakespeare might have included generosity along with mercy when he said "It blest him that gives and him that takes."

Generosity is a much better bargain than life insurance or annuities. You don't have to wait until you're old or dead to cash in on it. The returns are there right away, as soon as you give.

Social Dividends

You get a warm feeling from thinking of the folks who are benefiting from your gift. You feel more than ever that you're a part of your community—you've made an investment in citizenship that will return handsome dividends.

And you can look at the face in your shaving mirror or compact and know that you're seeing somebody who recognizes a call for charitable help when it comes, and knows what to do about it.

When you're helping your fellow man you're like a hydro power plant. You light up the community, but in doing so you light up yourself too.

Give the Red Feather canvassers a good welcome when they call this year. Go out and find one if you happen to be missed out. You won't lose by casting your bread upon the waters. You'll just be proving that you know which side it's buttered on.

From Our Files

Sept. 30, 1897—Buffalo: The worst woman in the Virginia Mountains, 'Pebe' Falls, a white woman, has been lynched by Negroes. The body was found, after several days, hanging from a sycamore tree limb.

Sept. 30, 1917—London: Gen. Sir William Robertson, Chief of the Imperial General Staff, said that in 1917 British armies captured more Germans and four times as many guns as the Germans took from the British during the entire war.

Sept. 30, 1937—The greatest crowds ever assembled in Victoria cheered President Franklin Delano Roosevelt on his arrival here. He was smoking a cigarette and wore a grey fedora.

As Our Readers See It

Broken Promises

At the last provincial general election I heard the Hon. Mr. Chant promise Victoria a new Court House at least three times.

In one of your issues last week it is reported that he said other places have no court facilities. This is surely hedging on the issue and I doubt very much if we shall see this promised new building for many years.

There will be, however, one consolation: that Victoria will by then have a member other than Mr. Chant. Many voters I have spoken to are very angry over these broken promises. When Government House burned down we were told it would be rebuilt before the centenary celebrations. Yet another broken promise.

Another minister making an exhibition of himself is Mr. Gagliardi. To wilfully break the speed limit on our highways is a poor example for a minister of the Crown (and the Gospel) to set our youth. His reference to the police who picked him up as "punks" is at least unchristian and a shocking expression coming from a reverend gentleman, whom Mr. Bennett describes as "a great man of God."

"How small these men,
How weak, how brittle,
When posing great
How truly little."
WALTER HILEY.

Endangering Lives

Surely Mr. Gagliardi was quoted wrongly in the newspapers regarding speeding and police officers and, if not, since when can any official endanger the lives of the public by testing curves on the highway without first giving warning?

If any such test is to take place the hour and the location should be under police supervision. The only people who would use the word "punk" in relation to any of our law enforcement agencies are the ones who run foul of the law.

Park, Gate and Traffic

The Broadway which has been ruthlessly cut through a beautiful wild area of Beacon Hill Park is now about completed except for black top. At least a third of the open area in front of Beacon Hill Park school has also been sacrificed to the insatiable demands of the auto. This new road with switch back 'vill, I think, prove an irresistible lure to the young punks in cars (where do they get the money for them) who delight in taking their squalid corners far too fast with their tires squealing in protest.

The chief purpose of the new highway is undoubtedly an attempt to give the civil servants, who abound in James Bay, a quick exit. But will it achieve this laudable object? There is going to be a very intricate position directly in front of the Thunderbird Motel where five streets meet, six if you include Heywood Avenue which is only a very few feet away and a blind corner at that. Are lights going to be installed here?

With the heavy traffic along Douglas and Blanshard Streets (both breasting a steep hill) there is sure to be a nice tie-up of traffic, morning, noon (home lunches) and night. Where is the premiss going to be erected? Not at the Douglas Street entrance, one hopes, and, unless it is of glass, it is likely to obstruct a driver's view very materially. A gate however ornamental seems a quite unnecessary luxury for a city like Victoria which carries one of the heaviest municipal debts of any in Canada. Surely in our park, which is not very large, we want trees and flowers and perhaps a few animals for the children — ducks there in plenty, indeed far too many. But ornate and ugly buildings, no.

Having opened up this very neglected part of the park will Mr. Warren and his staff try to imitate Butchart Gardens in miniature? The materials are all there. We could have a waterfall and pond where the old mine is now. They do it in the arboretum in Vancouver and very lovely it looks.

The area from Cook to Linden along the waterfront should be planted with suitable trees, this winter.

Flogging

Due to lack of discipline and proper correction it seems that teenagers have virtually established a reign of terror. Offences like the two cowardly attacks of violence by youthful thugs last week prey on the nerves of the gentler sex especially, so that many are afraid to venture out at night.

Commissioner Hamilton has the right idea when he says "physical punishment is necessary to bring these hoodlums to their senses." The soft treatment hitherto handed out is no deterrent. While the biblical law of "an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth" means that no punishment shall be given an offender greater than his crime, at the same time it provides for adequate punishment that will ensure a non-repetition of the offence.

The divine law is perfect justice, and supersedes anything devised by man. Accordingly, "to make the punishment fit the crime," flogging would be the proper sentence sufficiently severe to bring multiple abrasions as suffered by their victims.

Consider Consumer

Your excellent editorial, "Consider the Consumer" September 19, citing the pressure being brought to bear on the federal government to repeal the law against retail price maintenance, brings to mind the remarks of a former cabinet minister.

He had evidently been besieged by lobbyists urging tariff and other legislation to benefit their particular interests at the expense of the consumer. The minister is reported to have said that he often wondered what would happen to such pressure groups if consumers were for protection of one sort and another, any of which if granted, would raise living costs for all the users.

It is estimated that women do 80 per cent of the buying of consumer goods in this country. For this reason representatives of all the leading women's organizations in Canada met together in the year 1947 and formed the Canadian Association of Consumers, with a view to becoming informed consumers and having a voice.

This association has presented the consumer viewpoint to the Canadian Tariff Board on several occasions, including the hearings on retail price maintenance. Their brief stated "... Consumers have an indisputable right to the only protection against exploitation they possess—outside of the dangerous one of government price control—that is, free competition."

FROM LITTLE ROCK, ARK. By STEWART ALSOP

ONE native of this unhappy city used an odd phrase to describe the situation here. "It's kind of like you put a dragon in a wooden hog-box," he said. "That dragon is sure as hell gonna escape."

In the last few days here, the dragon has all too visibly escaped from the box. For what has happened here has revealed, with awful clarity, the bitter tensions that underlie the placid surface of American life. Little Rock is, after all, a rather typical American town—throughout the crisis, life has gone on here much as elsewhere, with fall bargain sales and bridge teas and meetings of the service clubs. Little Rock is not even a real Deep South town—the proportion of Negroes here is not much more than half that in Washington, D.C., and there is nothing here like the solid Negro city within-the-city you find in Philadelphia or New York or Chicago.

Little Rock's race relations have been uneventful in recent years, and the racial extremists have found no support in the press, which is not true in some other Southern towns. The Negroes vote here in important numbers, and the Little Rock integration plan is more symbolic than real.

Little Rock's race relations have been uneventful in recent years, and the racial extremists have found no support in the press, which is not true in some other Southern towns. The Negroes vote here in important numbers, and the Little Rock integration plan is more symbolic than real.

Dragon Escaped

For such reasons, knowledgeable people had advertised Little Rock's integration in advance as a model of what peaceful integration ought to be. Instead, the dragon of racial violence has escaped, leading to the greatest constitutional crisis since the Civil War. And the end, almost certainly, is not yet.

To be sure, Orval Faubus, Arkansas' devious and ambitious Governor, let the dragon out of the box. The point not to overlook is that the dragon was there all the time, lurking beneath the calm exterior of this seemingly typical American city.

The unreasoning fears and frustrations and hates which surround the race issue—and not only in the South—have boiled horribly to the surface. You could read them on the contorted faces of the housewives screaming outside the high school on Monday morning, or in the sheepish-secret-sullen faces of the crowds retreating before federal bayonets on Wednesday.

The optimists believe that President Eisenhower's intervention has nailed the dragon in the box again. It will, in the words of one optimist, "restore the doctrine of inevitability."

Even the most passionate extremists will recognize that some degree of integration is inevitable, say the optimists, and when the federal troops are withdrawn, local police will be able to protect the Negro children in the high school, and maintain order.

Others are not so sure. In the streets around the school house on Wednesday morning, you could hear muttered phrases in the sullen crowds: "They're gonna have to pull out those soldiers some time," or "If they want a fight, by God they'll get a fight."

Even the optimists admit that the ugliest sort of racial violence is still possible here, whether in the city itself beyond the reach of the troops at the school house, or at the school after the troops have been withdrawn. But even if the optimists are right, and the dragon is safely nailed in the hog-box here in Little Rock, what has started here is unlikely to end here.

For it is grimly significant that even his bitterest enemies agree that, as of today, Orval Faubus is a hero in Arkansas. If an election were held tomorrow, he would win hands down against all comers.

The Faubus formula for political success might read as follows: Defy the federal government, and thus create a situation in which mob violence and federal intervention are inevitable, and bask thereafter in the warm glow of popular approval.

The meaning of the Faubus formula is not lost, surely, on other politicians of the Faubus stripe.

Already, moreover, the extremists have achieved a blackmail power in a good many parts of the South, so that it takes real courage to take a moderate stand in public. Interview a moderate on the integration issue in Little Rock today, and you are almost certain to hear the timid, meaningful phrase: "But don't quote me."

Good Sense

On the other side of the ledger are the good sense of the majority of Southerners, and the recognition by responsible Southern leaders that violence is a sharp-cutting, two-edged sword.

But Little Rock makes one thing clear. If the dragon is not to escape from the hog-box again, and in an even more terrible way, President Eisenhower must achieve a near-miracle of national leadership, at once boldly firm and infinitely cautious. For no one who has witnessed the ugly events in Little Rock in the last few days could doubt that there is in the racial issue the stuff to tear the country to pieces.

TODAY'S GRAIN PRICES

CHICAGO (AP)—All board of trade futures traded sharply lower today.

Favorable weather and crop news pushed all deliveries of corn and several in soybeans to new seasonal lows during the session.

The bread grains suffered from lack of demand, both domestic and foreign. Buyers representing large bakery interests remained on the sidelines, apparently hoping for lower prices.

A slow and indecisive New York market slipped to the downside today. Losses of around a point were taken by American Cyanamid, Air Reduction, Allegheny Corp. and Royal Dutch.

AT TORONTO the mining list was lower in almost a solid line, uranium had a few gains than losses but the range was narrow. Senior base metals were easier.

Central Explorers gained 32 cents at $2.87 and Consolidated West Pete added 45 cents at $6.70, other sizeable western oil price changes were in the loss column.

AT NEW YORK Canadian grain prices included Walker-Goodrich, up 1/2; Aluminum Ltd., up 1/2; Dome Mines, 1/2, and Granby Mining, 1/2. McIntyre Porcupine was off 1/2.

Brazilian Traction, up 1/2, was a rare Canadian gainer on the American exchange. Losers included Canadian Marconi, Preston East Dome and Richell, all down 1/2.

AT MONTREAL prices slipped downward amid light trading today on the stock exchange.

AT LONDON the stock market continued unsettled today with wage demands and uncertainty about the credit squeeze casting a shadow.

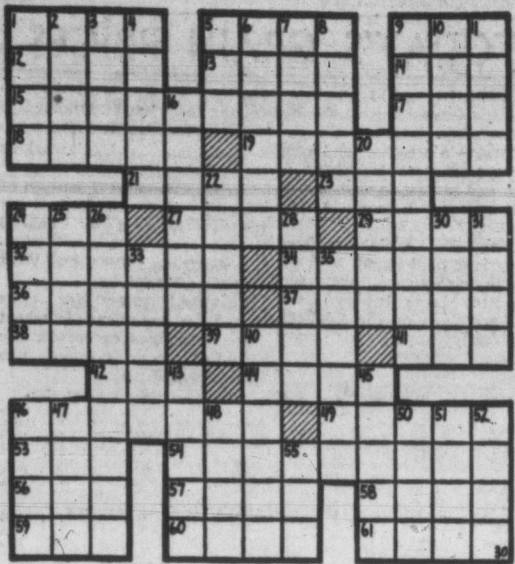

Industrials were dull but gilt-edged held quietly steady except the shorted stocks, which eased. In foreigners, German and Japanese issues were firmer and Chinese stocks were dull.

North American issues drifted lower. Canadian Pacific tended easier after a firm opening.

Oils were erratic and dull and coppers quiet.

AT VANCOUVER light trading saw little change in prices. Peace River Pete sold 6,500 at $1.06. Vancouver moved 2,600 at $1.43. Canam Copper traded 3,000 at 18. Sparmac sold 2,000 at 19.

BOY SCOUT ACTIVITIES

By FREEMAN KING

Victoria District Notes: Lieut. Col. R. Girard, district commissioner, was presented with his Part 11 Gilwell training card by Vernon Ridgway, president of the Victoria district council, at the quarterly meeting held on Thursday evening in headquarters, 1034 Johnson Street.

Reports of the various committees were given. It is proposed to hold the district annual meeting in November.

Arthur Chamberlain, assistant commissioner for training, gave a talk on a new scouting course for group committees.

All members of the association were asked to help with the Community Chest drive.

The monthly meeting of the Akela Club will be held on Thursday next, Oct. 3, in Scout Headquarters at 8:15 p.m.

All pack scouts are urged to turn out for this meeting, so that definite arrangements can be made in regard to training courses.

Tillamook Group: "B" Pack: Dalby Thom moved on to Scouts at a "going-up ceremony" and was welcomed into the troop by scoutmaster Bob Webb.

At the regular meeting on Wednesday, Richard Marsh, Len Bowers, Lloyd Roberts, Jim Dullin, Richard Groves, Tim Eade, Arthur Wright and Gerald Walker joined as "new chums." Akela Mary Smith welcomed them into the pack.

This brings the strength up to 34 boys. Mrs. L. Baur joined as a leader. The pack were presented with a new set of "air curtains."

Civil Servants Criticize Delay By Commission

Federal civil servants in B.C. Friday accused the federal civil service commission of "long and undue delays and serious errors" in setting their prevailing rates of pay.

The 24 delegates to the two-day district convention here of the Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada passed a resolution urging expansion of the commission staff in Vancouver.

Jack Waddell, Vancouver regional representative, told the convention that an "impossible situation" had arisen because too much work had been placed on the office for efficient pay rate setting.

The Vancouver office is responsible for setting pay rates, labor relations and general administration of federal labor laws in B.C., Alberta and the Yukon. It is staffed by four officers.

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then Andy Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive a valuable prize.

The youngster who asks the first question answers each day receives a 20-volume set of Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia (Canadian edition) and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Address your questions to "Andy Andy," Victoria Daily Times.

What Makes the Thunder?
 Thunder is like that barking dog that never bites. The rolling voice sounds full of roaring threats. But the thunder can't hurt anybody. It is no more than an explosion of hot air, way up in a cloud. The growing rumble follows the flashy lightning. And if you have forgotten to put up a lightning conductor—the lightning can be dangerous.

An explosion happens when a pocket of gas gets too big for its home. Dynamite explodes because solid materials suddenly turn into gas. And the gas needs more room, hundreds of times more room in a hurry. It rushes out with great force in all directions. The force of the expanding gas is strong enough to heave solid objects out of its way and even split great boulders to fragments.

But there are no boulders or solid objects up in the sky. The thunder happens in a cloud made of no more than air and mist. Nevertheless, a pocket of exploding air does get boxed up in such a cloud. As it breaks free from its prison, we hear the thunder.

This pocket of exploding air is created by the lightning. That is why the thunder always follows the lightning. The thunderhead—whose beautiful fancy name is cumulonimbus—is a cloud of mist and turbulent currents. Electricity is generated in the heaving air mass. The cloud becomes overloaded with electricity and some of it must be discharged. The lightning which rips through the cloud is a discharge of this surplus electricity.

The flash of lightning cuts a jagged path through the dark cloud with a blaze of glory. This is soon over. But the seething lightning effects the air through which it cuts. It leaves behind a path of hot air, far hotter than the surrounding air of the cloud. This path of hot air licks to expand. It must expand. But the heavy moist air around it refuses to let it expand.

How did the Indians get here before Columbus?
 Columbus was not surprised to find people already settled in the New World. He thought he had sailed clear around the world to India. Hence he made the mistake of calling the original Americans, Indians. Later, explorers discovered that the New World was a continent lying between the Atlantic and the vast Pacific. It was then that they began to wonder about the so-called Indians. Where did they come from? How did they get here?

It is now believed that the Indians came originally from Asia. They crossed in the northern region where the two continents came closer. We know they have been Americans for many thousands of years. And long ago, we are told, there were land bridges between Alaska and Siberia. Bands of Indians are believed to have walked or island-hopped from the Old World to the New.

Forest Fire Picture Good; Down One-Third From 1956
 Forest fires in the Vancouver Forest District, which includes Vancouver Island, this year are only about one-third as heavy as the same period last year, according to the B.C. Forest Service.

There have been 528 fires in the district, this year, with a loss estimated at $7,685. In 1956 for the first nine months, there were 1,460 fires and loss was approximately $109,800.

Forest fires to date in 1957 have hit heaviest in the Prince George District, where 144 fires have been reported with a loss of $61,200.

Throughout the province last week 30 fires were burning, and this week there were 51 new fires. With those extinguished, fires reported still burning numbered 35 as of Friday.

The fire hazard is low in most forest districts, excepting the Vancouver district area where it is reported as "moderate."

Outlook is that a general moisture recovery can be expected over the entire province, which will lessen still more possibility of forest fire outbreaks.

TURBULENT, ICE-TOSSING WATERS of Magpie Rock in Bellot Strait are captured on canvas by artist Commander Anthony Law, DSC, RCN, executive officer of Arctic patrol ship

HMCS Labrador, after the ship's initial transit of the channel. Bellot Strait proved to be the practical link in man's search for a feasible Northwest Passage for deep-draft vessels.

ARCTIC CONSTANT INSPIRATION

Officer-Artist Combines Careers in Canada's North

The north is many things to many men. To some, it is an Arctic waste. To others, it is one of the last unexplored bastions of the uncivilized world. To most, it is a place where life is a battle and living an existence.

But to Commander Anthony Law, RCN, the lands and waters north of continental North America are part of a familiar world, an integral part of his career, and a source for expressing his avocation.

The commander's mother, Mrs. Adrian Law, resides at 908 St. Charles St., Victoria.

Commander Law is executive officer of the Arctic patrol ship HMCS Labrador currently concluding her fourth consecutive cruise in the north since her commissioning in 1954. It is Commander Law's second cruise aboard.

He joined the ship in November, 1955.

During the current summer season of Arctic navigation, the Labrador contributed two major discoveries to man's knowledge of the north. The first is the finding of a deeper, wider, shorter and safer channel in the approaches to Frobisher Bay, Baffin Island. Second is the Labrador's confirmation of the Bellot Strait channel, permitting a practical key transit for deep draft vessels effecting a Northwest Passage.

Joint Operation

Both of these accomplishments resulted during the ship's participation in Arctic operations conducted jointly by the United States and Canada and directed by the U.S. Navy's Military Sea Transportation Service.

The Frobisher and Bellot

Strait events are recorded in oils, painted by Commander Law when shipboard duties permitted.

A native of Quebec City, Commander Law early in life decided to be an artist. He began to paint seriously in 1935, studying under such contemporary greats as Franklin Brinnel, Frank Varley, and Frank Hennessey.

In 1936 he exhibited his first one-man show in Quebec City at the age of 20. The following year the Royal Canadian Academy accepted one of his paintings. He also won the Jessie Dow Award for the best painting in the Montreal Art Association Spring Show in 1937. Each succeeding year his works were presented in one-man shows.

When the Second World War broke out, Anthony Law was serving in the army as a captain commanding No. 1 Ordnance and Ammunition Company, Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps. In 1940 he transferred to the navy and was sent overseas, where he commanded motor torpedo boats throughout the war years. Mentioned a number of times in official dispatches he was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross as a result of actions off Normandy during the 1944 invasion of France.

At war's end in 1945, he was appointed official naval war artist. Paintings executed at this time are owned by the National Art Gallery of Canada.

Keeps Up Studies

Commander Law maintains his interest in art and continues to study while in service. When the press of duties permitted, he conducted art classes for officers and men aboard HMCS Magnificent. An exhibition of his students' works was organized and displayed upon the "Maggie's" return to Canada after a four-month cruise in 1952.

The Labrador's commitments in the north are arduous and valuable. Under command of Captain Thomas C. Pullen, RCN, the ship already has entered ice-choked waters that have seen no vessel other than Eskimo kayaks since the days of early Arctic explorers.

Held Two Shows

Although his military duties absorb much of his time, Commander Law manages to keep up with his art work.

This summer, two one-man shows featuring works of the sea-going artist were shown concurrently. Primarily a land and seascape artist, the canvases feature subjects viewed during last year's cruise aboard the Labrador.

On view at the Nova Scotia Provincial Museum at the Halifax Citadel are a number of oil paintings dealing with the Arctic.

A show of watercolors, including Mediterranean scenes, is displayed in the Victoria Art Gallery.

FIRST CONTACT TODAY IN GLAZIERS' DISPUTE

First contact between the two sides in the 10-week-old strike of 26 city glaziers was expected today. Don Bushell, business agent for Local 1163, Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, was expected to meet with a management official of Canadian Pittsburgh Industries in Vancouver.

CPI is one of three strike-bound firms here. The others are O'Neil Glass and Paint Ltd. and Pacific Glass Ltd.

Meanwhile, the union resumed picketing today of a three-storey building under construction at View and Broad after a Supreme Court judge refused to grant an injunction against the picket line sought by the owner of the building, Huron and Erie Mortgage Corporation.

A-Bomb Horror Set for Display In CD Day Show

By JOHN MIKA

Broken bones, open abdominal injuries, battered heads, severe burns and lots of bleeding wounds. Those are the harsh realities of an atomic attack or natural disaster such as an earthquake.

Greater Victoria Civil Defence Corps will have the job of coping with them if and when the time comes.

Just how this will be done will be shown to the public with grim realism Friday—Canada's first national CD Day—in Bay Street Armoury.

REALISM ASSURED

Some 15 "casualties" with simulated injuries ranging all the way from flash burns to broken bones will pass through these two sections in a live demonstration of what would happen at the scene of a disaster when CD health services went into action.

"The injuries will look real, I can assure you," Dr. Mahaffy said in an interview. "It may be a little grim but we hope that all the displays of various CD services will give the public some idea of what to expect and what it can do."

45-MINUTE SHOW

Demonstrations of the display under her charge will run about 45 minutes and will be repeated during the four-hour exhibition between 7 and 11 p.m.

Tentative plans call for two shifts of 14 nurses, three doctors, 20 stretcher bearers, and 15 Red Cross and St. John's Ambulance aides.

The "casualties" will be brought in by ambulance where they will be tagged by a clerk, then carried on stretchers to a doctor-nurse team that will make a quick examination and decide what treatment will be needed.

Some will be sent to the resuscitation section. Others will go straight to the treatment tables where blood transfusions will be made, splints applied to broken bones, and wounds dressed.

FATALITIES TOO

Those deemed beyond hope will be sent to a "holding" section beside a temporary morgue. Following treatment, the patients will be dispatched to home or hospital as required.

Walking injured will be sent to a nurse for minor treatment after being checked in. A Red Cross canteen will have plenty of hot coffee on hand, for "patients" and a pharmacist will parcel out medications and drugs as needed.

Other displays by the various CD services such as radiation monitoring, evacuation control and rescue work will be shown at the exhibition.

Deadline Beaters Crowd City Hall

City Hall was one of Victoria's busiest spots today as residents sought to beat deadlines for the voters' list.

1. Getting on the voters' list, and 2. Avoiding penalties for property tax payments.

Despite the flurry of last-minute registrations, it was indicated the Victoria voters' list would be shorter by far than in 1956—at least as far as non-property owner voters are concerned.

Last year there were 2,000 voters in this broad category. It includes resident electors (anyone who has lived here six months) and tenant electors (persons representing firms which pay trades licences).

By noon today, only about 1,400 were registered. If they are not on the list by 5 p.m. today they cannot vote in December civic elections. Property owners are listed automatically.

Both city hall and sub-stations at 17 Victoria neighborhood stores have been busy, however, in final hours.

"Tax collections are healthy," said city assessor Alfred Joyce. The penalty of 1 per cent is effective on Tuesday morning.

"The pay counter has been swamped and there has been a terrific mail," the assessor added.

Nobody in Hurry to Follow Norris as Reeve of Oak Bay

Oak Bay councillors today played it close to the chest on possibility any of them might run for municipal reeve in the December elections.

The present reeve, Fred Norris, has announced he will not run again.

None of the present councillors contacted stated they definitely had the reeve's job in view, but a couple left the door open.

Clr. G. H. G. Mann said "it's a matter of the taxpayers asking me first. If the taxpayers want a man, they should approach him."

Coun. Geoffrey Ellis admitted "I have given it some thought—but well I don't think I would run for reeve."

Twelve-year council veteran George Murdoch said it was too early to decide if he would again contest the council seat. He was non-committal on the possibility of running for reeve.

Coun. Fred Hawes said he had not yet made any decision whether or not to run again.

Senior councillor J. V. Johnson, 34 years on council, will likely pull out.

"I think I've had enough. I don't think I'll run again," he said.

Weather Record Close for City

'Hottest September' Crown Depends on Sunshine Today

Today's weather will decide whether September, 1957, will go into the record books as the hottest in Victoria's history.

Up until Sunday, the mean temperature for the first 29 days of the month has been 60.8 degrees—a tie for the previous high set for the full month in 1943.

"Depending on today, and it looks good, we may set the record when we close our books for the month," weatherman Bill Mackie said.

Normal mean temperature for September is 57.1 degrees. Except for the odd shower caused by a storm off the California coast sending bands of precipitation to Victoria, the sky is expected to be clear today and the temperature to hover around the 70-degree mark.

Same prediction holds for Tuesday, with lows expected to be around 50.

INDIAN SUMMER BEST

Toting up the statistics, for all but the final day of the month, Mr. Mackie concluded this year's Indian summer has been kinder to Victoria than the regular summer season.

"It's been a dandy and it makes up for weather we had in July and August which left much to be desired," he said. "It hasn't been the driest month but it has been drier than normal and in the sunshine department we should end up with the third best September on record."

RAINFALL LIGHT

So far there have been 251 hours of sunshine, 41 1/2 more than normal. Precipitation was recorded on five days, three less than usual, for a total of .49 inches compared with the normal of 1.40 for 30 days.

Driest September occurred in 1918 and 1929 when only .10 precipitation was recorded. Highest temperature this month was 81.2 degrees, which also set a record for the day.

LCB STAFFS TO COME INTO MEDICAL PLAN

The provincial cabinet took action today to bring some 700 employees of the Liquor Control Board throughout B.C. under provisions of the Public Services Medical Plan Act.

Most of the employees are members of the B.C. Government Employees' Medical Service, which is expected to merge with the government plan Nov. 1.

Banking Hits Summit Despite Tight Money

The banking business is at a high point because the nation is so busy growing, but the tight money situation probably will be around for some time yet, the top man of the Imperial Bank of Canada said here today.

E. J. Friesen, of Toronto, visited his 112th branch in Western Canada today since his appointment as general manager of the bank 15 months ago. "It might be said the nation is in a period of consolidating past gains but I anticipate continued growth will follow," he said.

The cautious banker, who rose from junior clerk to the head of the $850,000,000 institution in 35 years, wouldn't gaze into any crystal ball to predict the money market's future or the probable course of currently rising interest rates.

Dawson Creek Firm to Build Cassiar Road

Second Lowest Bid Accepted by B.C.

Contract for construction of 25.5 miles on the Cassiar-Stewart road was awarded by the Provincial Highways Department today to Piggett Construction Ltd. of Dawson Creek.

A department spokesman said little actual road work can be done in the short construction season period left, but it is planned to carry out considerable clearing of the right-of-way.

Piggett's bid of $1,312,372 was opened at the end of July. Delay in award of the contract was caused by the need to obtain approval of the federal government, which has agreed to pay up to half the estimated total cost of $12,000,000.

REJECTED

The actual low tender of approximately $700,000 was submitted by Wade and Wells Ltd., but the bid was rejected because it was not accompanied by a performance bond. Piggett Construction was next lowest of the nine bids submitted.

Wade and Wells Ltd. was the storm centre of a controversy which flared up in the spring of 1956 over alleged waste in construction of the northern mining assistance road.

Up until that time the work had been done on a no-tender, machinery-rental basis under the department of mines.

CIL Workers Vote to Take 10% Increase

Some 150 workers at the Canadian Industries Ltd. explosives plant on James Island voted to accept a majority recommendation board recommendation of wage increases averaging 10 per cent.

A. W. Toone, negotiating committee member for Federal 128, Canadian Chemical and Explosives Workers, said today that 98 per cent voted in favor of acceptance at a special meeting Sunday.

A company spokesman today said the majority report is "under study." No decision by the company has been made yet to accept or reject the report.

The majority report recommended wage boosts, retroactive to Sept. 1, equal to 10 per cent of the annual payroll—equivalent to an average 18-cents-an-hour increase. Average wage at present is $1.85.

A union shop also was recommended, as well as a 10-minute daily rest period, one more statutory holiday for a total of nine and three-week vacations after 10 years' service.

A minority report is expected from the employer's nominee.

The union sought increases on a sliding scale ranging from 10 to 25 per cent. The company offered increases of 5 to 6 per cent during the board's hearing.

It Wasn't All Marilyn's Day

TORONTO—The legend is that a wedding is the bride's day—but it wasn't all that way when Marilyn Bell was wed here Saturday.

There was scarcely a dry eye in the house when her husband, Joseph Wesley "Chipper" di Lascio, responded to Gus Ryder's toast to the bride.

With struggling diffidence, his head dropping from time to time as he groped for words, the young American sociologist said: "There has always been only one girl in the world for me."

"Marilyn knows it, and I want my friends to know it—I love her more than any other thing in the world." These words, spoken with quiet sincerity, reaffirmed what everyone in Toronto is saying—that Marilyn has found herself a wonderful husband, a man uniquely like herself in his modesty, his love of sports, and the compassion inherent in his life's work.

A hard-bitten news photographer said: "The thing I like about it is this: Chipper fell in love with her when she was an unknown, before she swam Lake Ontario. He didn't latch on to a good thing like so many others."

Today the young couple is on a vagabonding motor honeymoon.

Soon they will take up residence in a modest apartment in East Camden, New Jersey, where Di Lascio has taken a post as parole officer in New Jersey's highly-regarded correctional system.

A doctor gave her a thorough check-over recently and pronounced her "101 per cent fit," thus effectively laying the ghost of rumors that the incident from a sixth-row pew, seemed amused. "He ought to be in better shape," he quipped.

The groom's father stepped forward, handed him a handkerchief, and helped him back to a chair.

"I thought I was going to faint," Lumsdon said later.

Gus Ryder, watching the incident from a sixth-row pew, seemed amused. "He ought to be in better shape," he quipped.

Maria Brenk, who was in Victoria with Marilyn last summer, was maid of honor.

After the wedding, a restricted list of about 75 guests adjourned to the Old Mill, a well-known restaurant in West Toronto, to toast the newlyweds in champagne.

TOPICS OF THE DAY

A wasp flew in his car window, stung him soundly and caused him to lose control, John Saint, John Dean Road, Saanichton, told police after his car crashed into a pole at 1.45 p.m. Saturday.

Mr. Saint, who had been driving on East Saanich Road near Central Saanich road boundary, was taken to Resthaven Hospital, Sidney, where he was treated for a fractured finger and head abrasions.

City of Victoria got more than its money's worth in a $1,500 daffodil bulb deal.

J. W. Howroyd and son Joe, 1710 Mortimer, provided 33,000 bulbs by agreement, then donated two truck loads.

The bulbs will turn Beacon Hill waterfront into a field of gold for centennial year.

The first model plane contest in Victoria for over five years was held at Lansdowne field on Sunday.

Thirty-one members of the Victoria Model Airplane League under contest director D. P. Collis, 1085 Nicholson, competed for trophies and merchandise awards.

First place in the combat and stunt events went to Leo Katila of Port Alberni and Ken Day of Courtenay won the 200-lap final.

TUESDAY MEETINGS

Kiwianis: 12.10, Georgian Lounge, Empress Hotel. The speaker will be Dr. W. H. Hickman, principal of Victoria College.

North Victoria Kiwanis: 6.15 p.m., Monterey Restaurant. The speaker will be DeLoas Walker, international speaker and traveler, on "Some Things Never Change."

American Institute of Electrical Engineers: 8 p.m., Flame Room, B.C. Electric Building. A. R. Scott of Canadian General Electric will speak on "Reduced Insulation for High Voltage Systems."

Inexpensive Recreation? Badminton's Your Answer

By PENNY SAVER

The score is now 15 to 12. The loser? Why Penny Saver, of course. Why? 'Cause she forgot to take out her membership at the badminton club this season. Oh, poor Penny!

It looks as if she'll play her badminton by remote control this winter . . . through this column.

So, how about an early start. Who's for a game of badminton? What a racket, this racket business is! Why go and spend $3.50 on having your racket restrung, when I can tell you where it can be done for $2.75? OK, be stubborn 'bout it, but the $2.75 job is just as good. No foolin'!

Among other things, your small son will undoubtedly arrive home some day from school and demand a badminton racket. Schools are encouraging this fine sport.

Special rackets for students are in town now, imported from Belgium. They have strong wooden shafts and are strung with nylon. Complete with laminated head, these rackets come at $2.75 and $3.95, according to their size.

Another import is the steel shafted Pakistan racket with strong nylon strings and a leather handle at the amazing price of $5.95. Good buy? You bet.

Famous names in badminton goods are of course any player's best investment. The steel shafts, calf skin grips and nylon braid string, add up to the very best. And nothing but the best for you, my friend. Prices range from $8.95 to $9.95.

Honk, honk! Don't be surprised if your shuttlecock suddenly starts calling to you, because these European-made "birds" are made of goose feathers. They are selling at three for 95 cents.

Most clubs insist that members wear their "whites" on the courts, and woe betide you if you don't.

With this in mind (and a bit of a guilty conscience left over from last season) I've been looking at shorts.

Men, white cotton drill shorts with a sharp hip pocket and black strips on the side are $3.50.

Oh, there are socks and socks, but these wool and nylon reinforced anklets at 85 cents are the most, to say the least!

"Davis Cup" model shoes are in the stores now and star players will tell you that well-supported shoes are a "must." Women's sizes come at $6.50 and men's, $7.50.

So, with all Victoria's champs and badminton enthusiasts, Penny Saver (how did I get in with all that brass?) wishes all new players who are joining clubs, fun and recreation for the season.

Want to know where I shopped? Phone me at 2-3131.

"Arise! 'Tis time to greet a perfectly gorgeous new day with a great big gripe about something."

Feminine Touch Found in Jewelry

OTTAWA (CP)—Women should have jewelry not only on them but around them, says a New York jewelry designer.

The man who adds the finishing touches to the designs of American couturiers—he's known as "Mr. Robert"—also puts a feminine touch to bou-doir items. Pearl-and-gold-encrusted perfume bottles, mirrors, tiny clocks and lamps are part of his accessory collection.

Here to open a display of his jewelry at an Ottawa department store, Mr. Robert told a reporter his copper jewelry is designed to complement fashionable tweeds, tailored fashions and black and brown shades. It's important, he said, to think of the clothes which will be a background for jewelry when designing accessories.

Choosing jewelry has nothing to do with the color of the wearer's eyes, he added. The most important factor was the material on which the jewelry would be worn.

Think of it—a hearing aid that is completely cordless; no sound tubes, no ear-moulds, no buttons in either ear, no attachments whatsoever! You hear by simply slipping on your glasses. This is only one of the great miracles described in Acousticon's new booklet—"Is there a Miracle Hearing for you?"

LOUISE DAVIS

On Etiquette

It isn't "Sissy" to Say "Thank You!"

When a man has been in the hospital and received flowers and gifts, should he write thank you notes like women do? I have never known of a man who has, and have been told that it is incorrect.

Louise Davis Answers: Is it ever incorrect for anyone to say thank you? Has a woman the right and privilege to say thank you more than a man? Does a man think it too effeminate for him to say thank you or to write a thank-you note? The answer is a great big NO. If a man, woman or child is grateful for a kind deed or thought, why in the world shouldn't they show their appreciation? If a man, recuperating from an illness, is well enough to hold a pen, he can write thank-you notes, even briefly, to those who thought enough of him and his well-being to go out of their way to send him flowers, gifts or get-well messages. He should not expect his wife, mother, sister or secretary to take this duty off his hands unless he is incapacitated. Men are too prone to leave social responsibilities up to their women. But "social" in this sense has nothing to do with a case like yours when thoughtfulness should be returned in kind. To be gallant isn't sissy.

Minister's Wife Stays In the West

OTTAWA (CP)—For the school year, at least, Mrs. Alvin Hamilton plans to stick to the west.

The attractive wife of North-western Affairs Minister Hamilton told a reporter that she was just hunting an apartment here for her husband. She quickly found one for the new cabinet minister, who was first elected to Parliament as Progressive Conservative member for Qu'Appelle, Sask., in the Dominion election last June.

But the Hamilton home will still be in Saskatoon, where 17-year-old Bob is completing his final high school year. They have a second son, Bill, 14.

Although born on a farm near Ottawa, Mrs. Hamilton grew up on a wheat farm near Kinley, Sask. She met Mr. Hamilton when in high school.

Sewing is one of her greatest enjoyments, and she makes most of her own dresses.

"I even want to make more clothes than I really need," she said. Good dress material is one of her weaknesses. "I can't seem to get out of a store without buying some."

pression by making a special greeting in fluent French to the Quebec delegates.

(He admitted afterwards he had done some "brushing up" Sunday night, but once had command of the language.)

The chamber is a bilingual organization, and Mr. Dupuis disclosed that an amendment will be put forward at the convention to include the French title of the organization in its corporate title.

At the same time, the president said the special simultaneous French-English translation service usually provided would not be employed at this convention.

This was because of the distance involved in transporting the special equipment and difficulty in obtaining translators, Mr. Dupuis said.

Invocation at the opening session was made by Archbishop H. E. Sexton.

Greetings from the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Canada were extended by president Douglas A. Fisher of Aurora, Ont.

MANY HERE SUNDAY

Delegates and wives arrived in the city during the weekend, the largest group on Sunday.

They were entertained at a buffet supper in the Crystal Garden by the City of Victoria at 6 p.m. and watched an Aquacade put on by the Victoria Chamber.

The national board of directors went into session at 9 p.m. and appointed committee chairmen.

Program Tuesday includes the annual meeting at 9 a.m. and election of officers.

At 10 a panel of speakers will launch discussion on the convention theme — "Productivity—Key to Prosperity."

Mr. Dupuis said the theme can be interpreted as "expressing the belief that material wealth and freedom depend upon the amount each worker produces during a given length of time."

"To keep pace with the tremendous pressure of increasing populations, growing demands for natural resources and rising standards of living—the working forces of the world must move faster and faster even to stay where they are."

"Those nations making the fastest strides in productivity will enjoy the greatest measures of prosperity."

"From this can be seen that the goal of increased productivity can be attained only by teamwork—team work on the part of management, labor, government and the consumer."

TO SET POLICY

A total of 13 proposed policy declarations were due to be discussed at the closed session today.

The declarations were chosen from almost 30 proposals to be discussed in detail by the committee because they were "of a contentious nature."

The list includes declarations on: Communism, profits, marketing, National Film Board, employer-employee relations, automation, employment of older workers, seasonal unemployment, immigration and citizenship, national health and health services, natural resources, Canada-United States relations and international trade relations.

The proposals, after discussion by the policy committee, will be presented to a plenary session of the meeting, open to discussion by all delegates.

The policy will then be presented to the federal government, probably in November. The policy will be the basis for all Chamber statements throughout the 1967-68 year.

FIRST DISCUSSION

The declarations on automation and on employment of older workers are both new parts of the chamber policy, under discussion here for the first time. Both were submitted by the executive council.

Dark and eloquent, Mr. Dupuis is president of the family firm of Dupuis Freres, which operates one of the largest department store and mail order houses in Montreal.

Formerly a practicing lawyer, he joined the board of directors in 1955.

"I am confident of the buoyancy of the Canadian economy," Mr. Dupuis said. "We may have some ups and downs but the general trade picture is bright, and by 1960 we should have adjusted ourselves to the new conditions."

"I am not too concerned over the credit situation, because Canadians generally are thrifty and level-headed and do not take on commitments beyond their means."

SAVINGS HIGHER

"This is evident from the fact that collections of consumer credit accounts are generally satisfactory while personal savings in the chartered banks have passed the $6 billion mark."

"Canadian consumers have more purchasing power than ever before, they are considerably more numerous and they have more take-home pay."

"The domestic market is becoming an important factor in our Canadian economy. It is true we must rely to a large extent on external trade. But we are also in a good position to absorb a good proportion of our home production."

STABBING VICTIM DIES IN VANCOUVER HOSPITAL

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 50-year-old east-end rooming house operator died in Vancouver General Hospital today of stab wounds.

William Ostashek was found stabbed in the left side of his abdomen Sunday. Police were called to the rooming house by John Kowbel, who said Ostashek told him someone had tried to kill him.

Police said they found a kitchen knife believed to be the weapon used on Ostashek. It was found wrapped in a towel.

A 47-year-old man was being questioned by police Sunday night.

"It will reduce our participation in the UBCM about 80 per cent."

"We can get along without the support of the smaller municipalities. We could hook up (for purposes of seeking special legislation) with Vancouver, and our demands would represent the people of about half the provincial population."

Mr. Wyatt agreed with the mayor, if Victoria is granted a private charter it could make the question of amalgamation in this area "more attractive," depending on what power is given.

Mr. Wyatt said Victoria drew up a draft charter some years ago while Arthur Patton was city solicitor. It contained several changes which have since been incorporated in the new Municipal Act.

The draft charter was shelved until the new act was made public.

Mr. Wyatt thought it "is quite possible" the government would permit Victoria, in a private charter, to elect its own police commission.

RAMSAY DOUBTFUL

If the city were granted the right to make other decisions now withheld from municipalities covered by the Act, surrounding municipalities might wish to enter Victoria.

Ald. Hugh Ramsay, who saw the UBCM toss out his pet resolution (which asked the government to stabilize the methods of applying business tax and trade licence levies), was doubtful, however, that Victoria should split too far from the UBCM.

"It may take two or three years for us to obtain a private charter. We wouldn't want to antagonize the UBCM." But, he added, he would support the request for a charter.

Ald. J. Donald Smith last week, without recourse to council, said he would take the matter to the legislature personally. He is an MLA for the city.

Faubus Undecided On Calling House

From AP and UP Dispatches

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—Governor Orval Faubus today said "at the moment, it appears very likely there will be a special session of the legislature" to take up the Little Rock integration crisis.

Such a session would be asked to deal with the Little Rock school integration controversy in which Faubus is arrayed against the federal government.

Faubus added with emphasis, however, that the special session "still isn't definite."

MAY CLOSE SCHOOL

There have been suggestions that the legislature be asked to close Little Rock Central High School where federal troops are enforcing court ordered integration of nine Negro students—and have the school reopened as a private institution.

Faubus said he thinks the legislature is "predominantly" in favor of an extra session. In Washington, some government officials expressed doubt today that Gov. Faubus or the Arkansas legislature can legally disintegrate Central High School in Little Rock.

"That would be an act to evade the constitutional rights of the colored children," said one government legal source here in close touch with the Little Rock situation.

The courts would not permit it. They (the state) would have to close down all the schools in Little Rock, not just the one racially-mixed school in the city.

Meanwhile, the second week of integrated education at Central High School began peacefully today. A reduced force of paratroopers, with bayonets removed from their rifles, stood guard as nine Negro children entered the school without incident.

FIFTH SCHOOL CLOSED

TRAIL—School and medical authorities here Saturday ordered a fifth Trail school closed because of an influenza epidemic.

James A. Stewart, co-ordinator of teaching and counselling for School District 11, said the Rossland Junior-Senior High joined four others shut because of the epidemic.

The total school population of the five schools is 2,500.

SKUNK YIELDS TO GAS

EDMONTON (CP) — The gas company outgassed a skunk here Sunday.

The animal became firmly entrenched beneath the floor of a south-side home and wouldn't move. The house was evacuated, a hole drilled in the floor and ammonia hydroxide poured in.

The gas from the chemical killed the skunk.

Favorable weather and crop news pushed all deliveries of corn and several in soybeans to new seasonal lows during the session.

The bread grains suffered from lack of demand, both domestic or foreign. Buyers representing large bakery interests remained on the sidelines, apparently hoping for lower prices.

'THEY CALL HIM CHARLES'

Prince Escapes Germ As Flu Hits School

LONDON (UP)—Asian flu has hit Prince Charles' new school but the heir to the British throne is not among those affected.

Five of the 93 boys at Chesham School in Berkshire, 50 miles from London, have Asian flu, matron Stella Jacka reported. They are isolated in a special room and were reported progressing satisfactorily.

Charles went to the school, of which his father is a former pupil, last week. The London Daily Express quoted an unidentified member of the staff today as saying he seems to be "settling in well."

Liberals Plan Early Meeting To Pick Chief

OTTAWA (CP)—The executive of the National Liberal Federation said today it has decided that a national leadership convention should be held at earliest possible date to pick a successor to Rt. Hon. Louis St. Laurent.

Mr. St. Laurent made it clear on arrival in Ottawa by train Sunday night that he intends to lead the Opposition through the autumn session of Parliament, starting Oct. 14.

Mr. St. Laurent is not a member of the executive council, and did not attend the meeting which is expected to sit all day and perhaps Tuesday.

Civil Servants Criticize Delay By Commission

Federal civil servants in B.C. Friday accused the federal civil service commission of "long and undue delays in serious errors" in setting their prevailing rates of pay.

The 24 delegates to the two-day district convention here of the Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada passed a resolution urging expansion of the commission staff in Vancouver. Jack Waddell, Vancouver regional representative, told the convention that an "impossible situation" had arisen because too much work had been placed on the office for efficient pay rate setting.

The Vancouver office is responsible for setting pay rates, labor relations and general administration of federal labor laws in B.C., Alberta and the Yukon. It is staffed by four officers.

Aussies Purge Lingo Used In Parliament

CANBERRA (Reuters)—A list of 513 "unparliamentary expressions" was circulated yesterday in the Australian parliament.

Strictly taboo are such epithets as a "blood-drinker," "sewer rat," "miserable body snatcher," "jabbering nincompoop," "mendacious political mongrel," "you gunning jack-anapee" or "the right honorable skunk opposite."

If the code is approved, the Australian legislators must also refrain from references to "cocktailism," "drunken interjections" and "dirty minds."

SALES TAX, RUM BLOCK YUKON-B.C. MERGER

There are two good reasons why the Yukon Territory does not want to join British Columbia.

"We don't want your 5 per cent sales tax and we won't give up our 30 per cent overproof rum," said Rolfe Hougen, 28-year-old Whitehorse delegate to the Canadian Chamber of Commerce convention in Victoria.

Mr. Hougen is president of the Whitehorse Board of Trade which has consistently voted against union with B.C.

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy. Andy will answer questions submitted by you, and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes. The winners who answer the first question correctly each day receive a 20-volume set of Compton's Pictured Encyclopedia (Canadian edition) and the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Address your questions to "Ask Andy," Victoria Daily Times.

What Makes the Thunder?

Thunder is like that barking dog that never bites. The rolling voice sounds full of roaring threats. But the thunder can hurt anybody. It is no more than an explosion of hot air, way up in a cloud. The growling rumble follows the flashy lightning. And—if you have forgotten to put up a lightning conductor—the lightning can be dangerous.

An explosion happens when a pocket of gas gets too big for its home. Dynamite explodes because solid materials suddenly turn into gas. And the gas needs more room in a hurry. It rushes out with great force in all directions. The force of the expanding gas is strong enough to heave solid objects out of its way and even split great boulders to fragments.

But there are no boulders or solid objects up in the sky. The thunder happens in a cloud made of no more than air and mist. Nevertheless, a pocket of exploding air does get boxed up in such a cloud. As it breaks free from its prison, we hear the thunder.

This pocket of exploding air is created by the lightning. That is why the thunder always follows the lightning. The thunderhead—whose beautiful fancy name is cumulonimbus—is a cloud of mist and turbulent currents. Electricity is generated in the heaving air mass. The cloud becomes overloaded with electricity and some of it must be discharged. The lightning which rips through the cloud is a discharge of this surplus electricity.

The flash of lightning cuts a jagged path through the dark cloud with a blaze of glory. This is soon over. But the seething lightning effects the air through which it cuts. It leaves behind a path of hot air, far hotter than the surrounding air of the cloud. This path of hot air licks to expand. It must expand. But the heavy moist air around it refuses to let it expand.

The path of hot air must break its prison walls of damp, resisting air. It is full of energy left by the seething lightning. So it explodes, sometimes with a loud crash and sometimes with a roll of drums. The slyer of hot air is now free to mix and blend in the turbulent currents of the dramatic cumulonimbus.

Though it takes time to explain, there is very little time between the flashing lightning and the roaring thunder. One event, however, reaches our
